TO THE READER

The work of compiling this genealogy was begun by Mr. Brown Thurston, of Portland, Me., in 1888. Although at that time Mr. Thurston was far advanced in years (74), nevertheless, he collected many facts and much data, and awakened considerable interest in this work. Early in the compilation of this volume I gave Mr. Thurston much assistance by personal search among probate and other court records, by reviewing published town histories, by gathering names from the vital statistics of towns and cities and by personal interviews with individuals bearing the Greenwood name. Since Mr. Thurston's death, which occurred Apr. 18, 1900, I have been actively engaged, unassisted, in pushing this work to completion and I feel much pride in what I have accomplished. I give the reader of this volume the ancient English Greenwood records, which cannot be other than of deep interest to him. By these records an unbroken line of ancestry can be traced from the present day, running through a period of over 700 years, back to the very beginning of the name Greenwood. It is seldom, indeed, that in any published family history has such a work as this been accomplished. The English records do not contain a list of every Greenwood who has descended from the first head. Such a list would fill many volumes, but the pedigree furnished gives a direct line of descent which is reliable and can be substantiated. That the name Greenwood had its beginning with Wyomarus, the first in the list of the English records, there can be no doubt. The earliest pedigrees affirm it and the earliest English records of all kinds are in proof of the fact. I have ascertained and give the exact locality where Wyomarus Greenwode lived and there are to be found in this volume illustrations showing home places of his immediate descendants. The earliest Greenwood wills recorded at York, England, I have abstracted and publish in this work. As showing the varied early spelling of the name Greenwood and in throwing light upon the method of living in ancient times, these wills are of exceeding interest. I have obtained and given in this work an extended account of the life, trial and execution of Rev. John Greenwood, an honored ancestor of many Greenwoods in America, who for religious convictions suffered death in England by the hand of the authorities of the English Established Church. He was a Separatist and he is the accredited founder of the Congregational religion as practiced today in New England.

It has taken much time, patience and expense to obtain all the English information found in this volume and I would particularly thank Mrs. M. E. Gibson, the present owner of Greenwood Lee, in Heptonstall, Eng., for much assistance she has given me in collecting facts in Greenwood history and concerning her own home. My thanks for assistance are also due Mr. J. Fred Greenwood, of Harworth, in Yorkshire, Eng.

It is surprising what a great amount of difficulty a compiler finds in a work of this character. Many families there are that keep no records of births, marriages and deaths. In such cases town records must be searched and if the search is made by the clerk of the town a fee must be paid for the service. Many members of families have become separated—children have grown up and gone away. Search for the members must be made; their location is often doubtful and many letters of inquiry sent out are returned to the writer unclaimed. The heads of families may know something of their own births and marriages but very little of their parents, much less of their grand parents and strictly nothing of their great grandparents and this necessitates personal search by the compiler of church, town or city records. After a family has been located and its record obtained then the family must be placed under its direct line of descent and this at times requires further search of records.

It has taken years of hard, diligent labor to produce this volume.

I see no reason why every Greenwood in America has not reason to feel satisfied with the Greenwood family as a whole. If town records in rare instances reveal a Greenwood name on the list of pauper subjects there are abundant instances that testify to the perseverance, thrift, enterprise and capability of the Greenwoods. This volume will reveal to you many Greenwoods who have won distinction in life and who occupy homes of beauty and abundance as a result of their labors. In every avocation of life you find a Greenwood name. This volume will tell you of Greenwoods who are heads of educational institutions, of Greenwoods well known in the ministry of the Gospel; they are among the skillful physicians of the country, are in the list of journalists and authors, are talented lawyers, are members of state legislatures, are at the head of large and prosperous manufacturing plants and are successful merchants. Also do we find Greenwoods who are pursuing the healthful avocations of tillers of the soil.

The family of Greenwoods is not as large as many others in America, yet it has many members.

What we have sought in this volume is positive accuracy. Matters of a doubtful nature we leave unpublished. Dates and names we verify and if there are errors in this work they come from the sources of our information.

Genealogy is not a new study in life. Burk says, "Those only deserve to be remembered who treasure up the history of their ancestry." It was not beneath the consideration of the creator of man, who as author of the Bible, very carefully instructed the writer of the book of Genesis to record the genealogy of Noah and to give all the facts that made it necessary to so effectually wipe out that generation of man from the earth, and with equal care, to record the virtues that saved his own family from the same destruction.

The interest in genealogical research is increasing in America as is shown in the number of family histories being published and the time has now come when every person of intelligence cares to know something of his ancestry. Prominent men of today are learning of their ancestry and making mention of it.

It seems to us that a work of the character of this volume cannot be other than a matter of great interest to every Greenwood. In this volume he finds his own record in life. The records in plain readable type also of his father, mother, brothers and sisters are given and if he cares to go back further here are the life records of grandparents and great grandparents and all of his ancestry running back to the earliest of his name. What a book for reference this is! In no other form can one get such a record —so compact, so accessible, so complete. We believe that the time is at hand when all individual life records are to be more faithfully kept than in the past and the work in the future in compiling a volume of this kind will be made less difficult.

Frederick Greenwood.

EXPLANATION

The names of Greenwoods and their immediate descendants are numbered consecutively through the volume.

The small figures after each Greenwood name denote the generation and the generations begin with the first ancestor in this country.

This character + placed before any name, denotes that further on in the book the same number will be found and same name, in larger type, placed so as to attract attention at once. Under these figures the history and children of the person named are given.

The grandchildren, when introduced after the first appearance of the name, are set a little further in from the margin than the children.

The indexes are very simple, referring to every name by number. There are five indexes. The first contains the descendants of Thomas Greenwood of Newton and those who married into that family. The second index contains descendants of Nathaniel and Samuel Greenwood of Boston, the third refers to the Virginia family, the fourth the Greenwoods and descendants who have come to America since the early pioneers and the fifth contains names I am unable to connect with any direct line of ancestry.

ANCIENT ENGLISH RECORDS

The following ancient English records were in the keeping of James Greenwood of York in 1715 and were in the keeping of Joseph Greenwood Clayton, of New Laithes, County York, Eng., in 1816. The first part is written upon parchment and shows a direct line of descent from Wyomarus [cater to Maud the Empress] who established a home in the forest in Heptonstall, in England, overlooking the beautiful Hebden Valley, 1154, and is the progenitor of the Greenwood family. A copy of these records is to be found in the College of Arms, London, Eng., and with these records is a drawing of the arms of Wyomarus.

Foot Notes

* Of Richard Greenwood's Benefactions to Kirklees see the Annals. He gave in Mortmain to the Prioress of Kirklees, in pure Alms, 88 Acres of Land, 2 acres of Meadow, 8 Acres of Wood, and 9s. 1d. Rent in Wickersley; Whereby it seems that he was then Lord of Wickersley.

† This John Greenwood purchased Wrenthorp and built a convenient Brick House there: He afterwards sold it to Mr. Francis Hey, for the Use of Mr. Edward Lowden, who afterwards sold the same to Mr. Robt. Benson, Clerk of the Assizes for the Northern Circuit, and Father of Lord Bingley.

‡ This James Greenwood and Mary his 2d Wife, by Indenture dated 21 Feb. 1658, conveyed the Estate at New-Laiths to Thomas Lord Viscount Savile, Earl of Sussex; and by Indenture dated 13 April 1670, James Lord Viscount Savile, Earl of Sussex, Baron of Pontefract and Castlebar, re-conveyed the Estate to the same James Greenwood.

§ This James sold his Estate at Stapleton, and afterwards retired to York, where he died. He was buried at St. Sampson's Church, as was also his Wife. He sold the Estate at New-Laiths to Jon. Swaine of Horsforth, in 1699. His Wife and Son Wm. joined him in the Conveyance. The Estate was afterwards re-purchased by Joseph Greenwood, 5th Son of Samuel and Judith.

THE GREENWOOD ARMS

A coat of arms may be defined as a mark of dignity or distinction descending from the father to the son. An old English print says that the intention of a coat of arms was to honor and adorn the family of him who had deserved well towards his country, to make that person more worthy and famous above those who had not done service, to the end that others might be encouraged to do service also. Coats of arms were intended also to establish a difference in lineage between the son of the noble ancestor so that the eldest son might be known from the second son, he from the third, and so on.

The ancient Romans, as a distinguishing mark, carried an eagle. The ensign of the French (Gallia) was a cock, that of the Scandinavians the horse, and the Persians a dove. Constantine, the first Christian emperor, instituted the order of Chevaliers and the members wore on their breasts the ensign of the cross. From Constantine individual families began to wear distinguishing marks and from these marks armorial bearing, or coats of arms, originated.

In the early times families that bore marks of distinction were those which had been given the right to bear arms and the right to carry arms was given only to free men, the gentry, nobility, and certain officers. The privilege of bearing arms was a most honorable distinction, for it not only testified to the rank of the original founder of the family, but it also testified to the character of the founder as well. No dishonorable family was ever permitted to bear arms.

Today in England any person on whom an honorary rank or title has been bestowed by the Sovereign is entitled to a coat of arms. Any subject of Great Britain, with or without rank or title, or any business firm or incorporated body, may petition for a coat of arms and if in the judgment of the Earl Marshal in England, the Lyon King in Scotland and the Ulster King of Arms in Ireland, who each have authority over their respective offices, the applicant has sufficient standing he may be granted a coat of arms.

Armorial bearings are of two kinds. The highest class consists of a shield with side supporters, and a crest, along with a motto. Only members of the Peerage in England and those specially privileged are entitled to use the supporters. The supporters to the royal arms of England are a lion on one side and a unicorn on the other side of the shield. The common coat of arms consists of a shield with various devices upon its face. A person assigned a coat of arms usually selects his own devices and the devices chosen represent in some way a history of the family. The devices chosen with their arrangement upon the shield is protected by patent and can be used only by the patentee. The cost of the patent in Great Britain is quite considerable.

The devices in the Greenwood coat of arms consist of three silver St. Andrew's crosses. The crosses are set upon a dark shield and are separated by a silver band representing two rafters of a house and known as a chevron. The band is ornamented with sable furs or ermines. In heraldry the description of these arms reads: "Sable, a chevron ermines between 3 saltiers argent." For ages the cross has been known as an emblem of religion and in these arms of Wyomarus Greenwode they represent interest in religious matters or religious zeal displayed by Wyomarus and his family.

A coat of arms in families shows lineal descent.

Thoresby's history of Leeds, Eng., published 1715, gives the date of the arms of Wyomarus de Greenwode as 1154.

Dictionary of heraldic terms used in Greenwood coat of arms:

Fess—wide band across center of shield.
Argent—silver.
Sable—black.
Spurrowles—pointed stars.
Chevron—band shaped like rafters of a building.
Ermines—small marks of the shape represented in the cut.
Saltier—cross in the form of an X.
Crest—appendage to edge of shield.
Demi-lion—half lion.
Rampant—standing upright.
Chief—upper part of the escutcheon.

ARMS OF WYOMARUS GREENWODE, of Greenwode Leghe, and used by his descendants. Date, 1154. Description: Sable, a chevron ermines between three saltiers argent. These arms are found in all branches of the Greenwood family and in some churches in England, near Heptonstall, where Greenwood names are recorded. They are known as the Greenwood arms.

ARMS OF REV. JOHN GREENWOOD, who was rector of Brampton, Norfolk County, England, from 1620 to 1663. He was ejected from his ministry in 1630 by the Parliamentary party but returned again. His daughters, Anne and Elizabeth, were born at Brampton. His will proved at Norwich, Eng., Oct., 1663, was sealed with these arms and in the will was a reference to a ring testator wore, on the stone of which was a cut of the same armorial bearings. He was son of Rev. Christopher Greenwood, rector of Shottesham, County Norfolk, Eng., who died February, 1607-8, and whose brother, Edward Greenwood, was rector of Great Dunham, Swaffham, County Norfolk, who died 1591. Description of arms: Sable, a chevron ermines between 3 saltiers argent; crest, a demi-lion rampant or, holding in his paws a saltier argent.

The above are descendants of Wyomarus Greenwode through James and wife, —— Michael.

Joseph Edmondson, F. S. A., in his Complete Body of Heraldry, published, London, Eng., 1780, refers to the above arms as being in use at Burg-Castle, in Suffolk, and Castleton, Greenwood and Norton-Bruin, in Oxfordshire.

J. Bernard Burke in General Armory adds Brookwood Park, County Hants, as having Greenwoods using the same arms.

ARMS OF THE GREENWOODS OF WESTERTON

In 1565 Thomas Greenwood, of Learings, in Heptonstall, Eng., and his son, Thomas, purchased of Richard Bunny and Bridgett, his wife, lands in Newton, Wakefield, Alverthorpe, Thornes and Stanley, in Yorkshire, and by the transaction Bunny Hall, Red Hall, Westerton Hall and Melborne Hall, with lands attached, passed into the hands of the Greenwoods, who became known as the Greenwoods of Westerton—the place now known as West Ardsley, Eng., three and one-half miles from Wakefield. The old Brown Hall has passed into decay and in recent years was used as a farm house. The head of this family was a Robert Greenwood. According to Dugdale's Visitation of York, Surtees Society publication, vol. 36, in 1665 Robert Greenwood, of West Ardsley, aged 52, on the 5th of April, entered his pedigree showing him to be the third son to Robert Greenwood of the same place and grandson to James Greenwood by Mercia, daughter of Mr. Broome, of Broome Hall, Yorkshire, and great grandson of Robert Greenwood, younger son to a Greenwood of Greenwood Lee, in Heptonstall, Yorkshire, by Alice Shaw, daughter of Paul Shaw, of Hangingroyd, in parish of Heptonstall. Description of Westerton arms: Sable, a chevron ermines between 3 saltiers argent; and crest, a leopard sejant.

In 1587 a Robert Greenwood, of Inner Temple, gent, was deputy steward of Wakefield and Bradford manors.

ARMS OF THE GREENWOODS OF SWARCLIFFE HALL

In 1612 one John Greenwood described as a French merchant, or one who traded in French goods, purchased land in Wrenthorpe, Eng., and built a convenient brick house there with a wall of brick which enclosed 3 or 4 acres of his estate. The house became known as Red Hall. Wrenthorpe joined the township of Stanley, in the parish of Wakefield, and was about one mile north of that town. This branch of the Greenwood family was afterwards described as of Stapleton, 4½ miles southeast of Pontefract. They claimed to bear arms same as the Westerton Greenwoods, with slight additions, and to be of that family. A few years after 1612 Mr. John Greenwood sold his property at Wrenthorpe and later years the Greenwoods lived at Swarcliffe Hall, 4 miles from Ripley. From Dugdale's Visitation of York it appears that the Greenwoods of Stapleton descended from James Greenwood, a younger brother of the Greenwoods of Greenwood Lee. Description of arms: Percher, sable and argent, a chevron ermines between 3 saltiers, couped, counterchanged.

J. Bernard Burke, in General Armory, thus describes the above arm: Per chev. sable and argent, a chev. between 3 saltiers, couped, counterchanged; crest, tiger sejant.

ARMS OF JAMES GREENWOOD OF YORK, who was in possession of the Greenwood ancient records, 1700.

ARMS OF MILES GREENWOOD, Norwich, County Norfolk, Eng. These with the family descent, dated Norwich, Sept. 25, 1723, are to be found in Miscellaneous Pedigrees, Vol. 1, of Sir Isaac Heard, Garter, now in College of Arms, London, which states that he used them on an ancient seal, viz.: Argent, a fess sable between three spurrowles [or six pointed stars pierced of the field] in chief, and three ducks in base, all sable.

Edmondson's Heraldry ascribes to these arms the date of 1594.

J. Bernard Burke in General Armory, published, London, Eng., mentions these arms as being used in both Norwich and York, Eng. The crest he describes as a mullet between a pair of duck's wings expanded.

ENGLISH HISTORY OF THE FAMILY AND ORIGIN OF THE NAME

For full seven centuries the surname Greenwood has been in use in England. The early English Greenwood records given in this volume and a long Greenwood pedigree now in the College of Arms, in London, Eng., show the progenitor of the Greenwood family in England to have been a Wyomarus de Greenwode. All family records of Anglo-Saxon extraction are believed to run back to this Wyomarus and the name Greenwood may be regarded as having had its beginning with him. This Wyomarus was caterer to Maud, the Empress, mother of King Henry II, who reigned in England A. D. 1154-1189. Wyomarus furnished the provisions for the household of the Empress Maud (known also as Matilda) and was of the titled gentry or nobility of his time. His coat of arms, which all Greenwoods are entitled to use, appears in this volume.

In the township of Heptonstall, Eng. (which is in the West Riding of Yorkshire), 1½ miles from Heptonstall village, on the old Roman highway, which leads from Heptonstall to Colne, there stands today a grand old hall or manor house, built of hand-hewed stone. This house, which is of such ample pretentions as to be known as a mansion, has for many centuries been standing here. It is set high up on the slope of what is known as Hardcastle Crags, or Hebden Valley. It overlooks this beautiful wooded valley and the scene presented is picturesque and enchanting. Many tourists are attracted to this spot by the grandeur of the scene. According to Thoresby's history of Leeds, published 1715, and from the records which appear in this volume, this mansion was built by Wyomarus or his immediate descendants and was their home place. The mansion with its buildings and land attached is known as Greenwood Lee. The mansion is 20 miles due west from Leeds and is 2 miles distant from the flourishing cotton manufacturing town of Hebden Bridge.

Three-fourths of a mile from Greenwood Lee, on the same old Roman road leading from Heptonstall to Colne, is a second building of stone and is known as High Greenwood. This structure was rebuilt 100 years ago and is now much changed from its former appearance. In the neighborhood of Greenwood Lee and High Greenwood there are today such places as Greenwood Lee Wood, High Greenwood Wood, Greenwood Lee Clough, Green Hill and others, and the public records of Heptonstall show that these places were formerly included in what was once known as Greenwood. It was a little settlement in itself. At one time this tract was a forest and this little settlement took its name from that forest. It was a large tract of green wood, of waving trees of oak, ash, maple and birch and many other varieties of wood. Probably the forest from which Greenwood took its name included the whole district from Stoneshay Gate to Widdop Gate and from the right side of the highway down to the river Hebden in the valley. The clearing in the forest was begun on the plateau skirting the valley. Here Greenwood Lee was built. It is possible that the first houses were of wood and then after the forest was somewhat cleared Greenwood Lee was constructed; then followed the construction of High Greenwood, the Clough house and others. This settlement of Greenwood was one of the oldest in Heptonstall and the Greenwoods of the settlement from ancient times down to the present day have ever been prominent in shaping the history of that old town. Turn over the pages of history of old Heptonstall, either of its remote past or immediate present, and the name Greenwood stands out prominent before you. Whichever way you turn in Heptonstall you are confronted by that name. The largest tax payers of Heptonstall have ever been Greenwoods, while the records of the ancient parish church of the place and the old wills recorded at York show generous contributions by Greenwoods to the church and large bequests to public charity.

Previous to the year 1154 very few people in England had more than one name. Wyomarus was known only as Wyomarus. Surnames were introduced into England by the Normans after their invasion, in 1066, and many family names have originated in England since that time. After Wyomarus had established his home in the forest at Heptonstall, and a little settlement of his descendants was made there, he became known as Wyomarus de Greenwod (Wyomarus of Greenwood). The children and descendants of Wyomarus also took similar names and were known as Bartram de Greenwod (Bartram of Greenwood), Robert de Greenwod (Robert of Greenwood) and so on, and the old public records of Heptonstall show that it was nearly as late as the year 1500 when the surname Greenwood became fully established and the Latin word "de" was omitted. Greenwood is a place name. The family takes its name from a locality and that locality the green wood or forest at Heptonstall. It is evident that the mansion, Greenwood Lee, took the first part of its name from the settlement Greenwood and the last part of its name (Lee) from the fact that its location was sheltered or that the buildings afforded shelter to both men and beasts. Just the date Greenwood

Lee was built there are no records that show. In 1362 Greenwood Lee is mentioned in Heptonstall public records as being occupied by Thomas de Grenwod. In 1379 Hegh Grenewod (High Greenwood) is mentioned. There are no earlier public records referring to these buildings.

Public records referring to the Greenwoods at Greenwood are of much interest. From the earliest public court records we find that on Nov. 22, 1274, one William Grenehod (Greenwood), was, for taking bushwood from Erringden forest, fined 6 pence, and according to the record a pledge was given by Luvecock, his brother, that it would not occur again. In the following year, or Friday, in whit-week, 1275, John del Greenwode (John of the Greenwood) was fined in the court of the Lord of the Manor 2 shillings for the escape of 3 beasts to the meadows of Rawtonstall. These records show that at that time there was a settlement in the forest at Greenwood and that some of the land had been cleared, fenced and cultivated. The court of the manor was held at Wakefield by the Earl of Warren, or John de Warren, as his real name was. The Earl had been given by King Henry III (1250) free warren, or right to preserve the forests for game in Heptonstall, Wadsworth, Rawtonstall, Stansfield and Langfield and he punished all intruders. He was Lord of the Manor of that district and once when his right was questioned he unsheated his sword and stretching out his arm declared that it was that weapon that gave him his right.

In the year 1379 a poll tax was issued by King Richard II upon all persons in England over the age of 16 years in every parish or township. The tax list is of interest as showing who was living at Greenwood at the time. The list follows:

Ricardus de Grenwod & vx. iiij d. (Richard of Greenwood and wife 4 pence.)

Thomas de Grenewod & vx. iiij d. (Thomas of Greenwood and wife 4 pence.)

Thomas de Grenewod & vx. iiij d. (Thomas of Greenwood and wife 4 pence.)

Thomas de Grenewod iiij d. (Thomas of Greenwood, single.)

From the above list it would appear that 4 Greenwoods constituted the inhabitants of Greenwood in 1379—three of the Greenwoods were married and their wives living and one single person liable to a tax on account of age. One of these Greenwoods was named Richard and three were named Thomas. Besides these married Greenwoods there may have been children under the age of 16. Each was taxed 4 pence and evidently the tax had no bearing on the property each held.

The records of the Court of the Manor show a Richard de Grenewod as a juryman in Oct., 1379, and in 1380 a Richard, son of Thomas de Grenewod, was a juryman at both April and October Turns. At an inquisition held at Halifax, 1362, a Thomas de Grenewod is named and described as the father of William and was probably living at Greenwood Lee. A Thomas de Grenewod was a juror of the Manor Court held 20th of October, 1413, and was then living at High Greenwood. His name was second on the panel, a position he continued to occupy 1433 and 1434. Thomas de Grenewod, the single man on the poll list, may have been the Thomas de Grenwod whose name appears on a jury list 3d of Oct., 1434, when he is last on the list of those empaneled at the local Turn.

Public records show that soon after 1382 that the Monks of Lewes, in Yorkshire, had some control over the estates at Greenwood, and those adjoining, and drew revenue from them, the right being given by the Earl of Warren.

In 1433 a John de Grenewod was living at Greenwood Lee and was the wealthiest landlord in Heptonstall, for he was paying a tax of 24s. 9½d. annually in the way of rent, which was considered large as money was then valued.

On Dec. 16, 1439, the 18th year of the reign of King Henry VI, a rental was made in Heptonstall by order of the Proctor of the Priory of Lewes and from this rental it is learned that one Thomas Michell (Mitchell) was then living at "Heghegrenewodde" (High Greenwood) and paying rent to the Priory of Lewes of 6s. 2d. per year. The Mitchells had evidently married into the Greenwood family. Formerly they occupied adjoining estates. They are of Norman descent. John de Grenewodde of Grenewoddlee (Greenwood Lee), the largest occupier in Heptonstall, paid an annual rent for Greenwood Lee of 6s. 7½d.; for lands and tenements called Gloghehous (Clough house), which is situated near Greenwood Lee on the far side of Greenwood Lee Clough, to the left of the road, 15s.; for a close of land called "Gyllotraide," 4d.; land and tenement at "Robedshag" (Robert Shaw), near the slack Baptist chapel, 17d.; for other lands and tenements in Heptonstall, not described by name, 17d.

Richard de Grenewode, probably son of John, the same year was holding lands and tenements at Colden-Ing, for which he paid yearly rent 20d. He also held one parcel of land called "Walkerwyfynge," for which he paid 4½d.

William de Grenewodde held lands and tenements in Learing, in Heptonstall, for which he paid yearly rent 20d. He also rented "Esthap More" (East-up-Moor) for which he paid 20d., and also one acre of land taken from waste for which he paid 4d. per year. He is probably the same William Greenwood who was constable of Heptonstall in 1461. There was also a second Richard de Grene-wodde who held lands and tenements in Heptonstall township, for which he paid 3s. 9½d.

The rental list of 1439 shows that there were only 12 persons in the township of Heptonstall at that time paying rent. The combined rent of the 4 Greenwoods amounted to 34s. 3½d. The combined rent of the other 8 persons was 22s. 8¾d. The largest tax payer was John de Grenewodde (John of Greenwood); second largest in Heptonstall, John Pygehils (Pickles), who paid for land and tenements in the town, 7s.

The old English public records show that very early the Greenwoods of Greenwood, in Heptonstall, began to scatter to the surrounding districts, marrying and intermarrying there, accumulating property and establishing homes. At one of the Turns of the Court of the Manor one Roger Greenwood of Sowerby (6 miles from Greenwood), in 1326, was fined 3d. for his beasts unlawfully eating from the herbage of the forest. The record reads: "Rog'us de Grenwod, p. exh. best, iij d." In 1432 a lease, which was in Latin, was made for 40 years of a certain property called "Huldisworth Inge," in the township of Ovenden, near Halifax, at 20s. per year, to William Greenwood of Mixenden, by William Otes and others. In 1509 John Greenwood with Peter Crabtree, two clothiers (manufacturers of cloth), acquired from Richard Young and Margaret, his wife, what is know as Old Town farm, in Wadsworth, and the adjoining one known as Crabtree farm, in Wadsworth. In 1524 both these men paid a subsidy of 20s. each to King Henry VIII and in later years they were both said to have been accused of using flocks in the manufacture of cloth. On his death John Greenwood was succeeded in business by his son William.

In 1563 William Greenwood, a merchant or chapman, of Wadsworth, purchased from Wm. Brigg and Henry Brigg, his son and heir apparent, land called Potter Cliff, at Old Town, in Wadsworth, and about the same time he bought lands called Hirst from Henry and Charles Farrer, in Old Town. He was active in church matters for in the Heptonstall church registers, dated Apr. 21, 1572, he signs an entry to the effect that 120 organ pipes had been laid up in the church coffer.

Greenwood Lee, from the time of its construction, passed down through an unbroken succession of generations of Greenwood owners until 1642, when it passed out of Greenwood possession. The last Greenwood occupant of the estate was Rev. Charles Greenwood. He was rector of Thornhill, and through the influence that his own family had attained in the district as well as his connection with Greenwood Lee, he became Lord of the Manor of Heptonstall.* He was son of James Greenwood of Sowerby, a direct descendant of the Greenwoods of Greenwood Lee. His mother was Cecilia, daughter of Chas. Radcliff, of Todmorden. He left no living heirs. The will of the Rev. Charles Greenwood, proved July 14, 1642, provided for the establishment of a free grammar school in Heptonstall, the buildings for which he had erected.† He also bequeathed £100 to be lent and put forth from year to year to ye poor people inhabiting within ye township of Heptonstall to succeeding ages for ever, the better to enable them to live by their labors in their honest vocations." He gave also money for the founding of two fellowships and two scholarships in University College, in Oxford, of which he had been fellow, and 1500 pounds more toward building of a new quadrangle at the college, but the college was wronged of these bequests through the misconduct of the executors.

In 1650 Greenwood Lee was twice sold. For a time it was in possession of the family of Sutcliff. In 1760 it was purchased by Abraham Gibson and at present it is occupied by Mrs. M. E. Gibson, widow, and her son Abraham, who are direct heirs of the Abraham first mentioned.

The last Greenwood occupant of High Greenwood was one William Grenewod, whose will was proved at York Apr. 2, 1522, and his descendants. In 1559 High Greenwood was purchased by a Mr. Mitchell and it has remained in the Mitchell family ever since, having been passed down from one generation to another. Both Greenwood Lee and High Greenwood are today used as farmsteads. Both estates join and both extend from the moors at the summit of the hills to the valley below.

*It appears from a manuscript in the British Museum, No. 797 of the Harleian mss., being a collection relating to Moreley Hundred, that John Warren, Earl of Surrey, claimed free warren in Heptonstall by charter dated 37th of King Henry III, A. D. 1253. The right of the manor passed into other hands for by an inquisition taken at Pontefract 25th Aug., 5th and 6th Philip and Mary, or A. D., 1558, that Sir Henry Savile, Knight, died siezed in fee tail of the manor of Heptonstall and from him it passed by degrees to Sir George Savile, of Rufford. In the 5th King Charles, 1629, court was held at Heptonstall by Charles Greenwood, Clerk, Rector of Thornhill, Lord of the Manor of Heptonstall. Later the Right Honorable, the Earl of Scarborough, became Lord of the Manor of Heptonstall.

One of the descendants of Charles Greenwood was cornet to Captain Gascoigne and another, Ferdinand Greenwood, was lieutenant of horse in the service of King Charles the First, and was slain at Newark.

†The school building provided for by the will of Rev. Charles Greenwood is yet in use and stands close by the old churchyard in Heptonstall. The school house was given as a free gift to the people of Heptonstall and land and property at Colden, in Heptonstall, was endowed for the perpetual care of the building and continual salary of the master of the school. The executors of the will consisted of John Greenwood, son of Robert Greenwood, John Greenwood of Elfaburgh Hall, William Mitchell, Thomas Greenwood of Learing and Richard Robertshaw and their heirs.

New Laithes Hall, Newlay, Yorkshire, Eng.

For many years the home place of Greenwoods descended from Wyomarus. Sir William Dugdale's Visitation of Yorkshire gives the date 1180, when members of the family first settled here and a Charles Greenwood was living here as late as 1816. A picture, or color print, is yet hanging on a wall in the house bearing the inscription, "New Laithes, near Leeds—Charles Greenwood, Esq." Evidences exist of an underground passage between this house and Kirkstall Abbey, which is a short distance away. In excavating for repairs of the house building stones were found resembling those of the Abbey, built 1157. Some stone lions, evidently used as torch holders are on the premises and have been placed around the foot of an oak tree, yet living, estimated to be 700 or 800 years old. The house has been rebuilt and is changed from its original appearance. It is now occupied by Mr. J. R. Cross.

The buildings now at Greenwood Lee consist of a large two story stone house, about 30 x 40 feet in size, with a long ell 60 x 30 feet, also two stories. The house has five gables; roofs covered with slate or thin stone and the house is especially noticeable for the large number of chimney tops and stone balls above the roof. Back of the main house is a second stone house 40 x 40 feet in size, two stories high, with a gable, slated or stone roof. There is a large stone barn on the premises unique for its architecture. It is only one story high and has a high pointed roof. It is 100 feet long and 60 feet wide. In a stone over the porch of the large house is cut the figures 1712. This porch was rebuilt that year by the Sutcliffes. Otherwise the exteriors of all the buildings are as they were originally made except new glass windows and chimney pots. The estimated age of the present buildings at Greenwood Lee is 500 years. Probably the present structures were built about the year 1400 and are an enlargement of the original or first buildings bearing the same name. High Greenwood when rebuilt is believed to have been standing since the year 1260.

According to Tappan's history of England, as late as 1500 the poor people in the country lived in cottages made of sticks and clay. There were no real chimneys, but only a hole for the smoke to go out. With Greenwood Lee, High Greenwood and the Clough house, large buildings of stone, the Greenwoods of Greenwood may be regarded as wealthy people for their time.

Ralph Thoresby in his history of Leeds, Eng., and the West Outriding of Yorkshire, published 1715, and Whitaker in an edition of Leeds, published 1816, both refer to a place known as New Laithes as famous for its long Greenwood occupancy. Thoresby says of New Laithes: "Here for many years resided the very ancient family of Greenwood descended from Wyomarus, who flourished ano. 1154, cater to Mawd the Empress." This New Laithes is the small village 5 miles north-west of Leeds, near the river Aire in the township of Newlay. New Laithes hall, or manor house, is yet standing, but no Greenwoods or their descendants are now living there. New Laithes hall came into possession of the Greenwoods as early as 1180 and was occupied by a Charles Greenwood as late as 1816. On Apr. 13, 1670, the estate was sold by a James Greenwood to Thomas Lord Viscount Savile, Earl of Sussex, but the estate was repurchased by a Joseph Greenwood, who died there in 1728.

The Empress Maud, with whose household Wyomarus de Greenwod was connected was daughter of King Henry I, the third of the Norman kings to rule England. While still a child she married the Emperor of Germany; that person dying she was married to Geoffrey, Count of Anjou, a Frenchman. Her mother was known as "Good Maud," daughter of the King of Scotland. By Geoffrey she had a son who became King Henry II of England.

The early English records which appear in this volume have been passed down from one generation of Greenwoods to the next succeeding. In the year 1700 the records were in the keeping of James Greenwood of York; in 1815, they were in the hands of Joseph Greenwood Clayton, of New Laithes. (See Whitaker's History of Leeds.) The records are in two parts. The first part is upon parchment. The second part is in the autograph of Sir William Dugdale. By these records every descendant of Thomas Greenwood of Newton, Mass., can trace an unbroken line of ancestry extending over a period of 700 years and through many generations. The line of descent in the English records from Thomas of Newton runs through John Greenwood, the priest, who was great grandparent of Thomas.

The old church at Heptonstall (Thomas a' Becket), at which all Greenwoods of the parish worshipped, was built as early as 1260, but is now in ruins. It was disused in 1854. An effort is being made to perpetually preserve the now standing walls of the old stone structure and contributions for this purpose are solicited from all interested persons. The Vicar of the Heptonstall Parish Society, Heptonstall, Eng., receives subscriptions. The registers of the old church run back only to 1593. The first Greenwood interment entries are: March 20, 1593, twin children of William Grenwod, Wardsworth; March, 1594, infant of Richard Grenwod, of Ayringden; Apr. 10, 1594, John, son of John Grenwod, of Stansfield; June 7, 1594, wife of Ric. Grenwod of Lang; June 11, 1594, infant of Simion Grenwod.

No Greenwood marriages were recorded in 1593, but in 1594 there are two: May 5, Matthew Grenwod and Jane Buckley and Richard Grenwood and Agnes Grenwood. In 1599 these baptisms appear, the first in the registers: July 15, Grace, dau. of John Greenwood of Wadd.; 22d, Doriti, dau. of William Greenwood; 22d, Grace, dau. of Thomas Greenwood; Aug. 12, John, son of Simion Grenwod of Wad.

A John Grenewode was clerk (in Holy orders) of the Heptonstall Church in 1439, a Sir John Grenwodde, curate, in 1531, and Thomas Greenwood, of Elphaborough Hall, officiated 1712-1744. He died 1748. A gallery at the west end of the north nave of this church was called High Greenwood loft, but when erected is not known.

In the gallery of the tower of the new church of the Heptonstall parish society at Heptonstall, is a marble tablet placed in memory of a John Greenwood, whose death occurred June 16, 1823, aged 81, in recognition of his gift to charity. Names of

The Old Church at Heptonstall, Eng.

Now in ruins. It was named in honor of the Archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas à Becket, murdered in the reign of King Henry II, July 7, 1170. Built about 1260; abandoned and unroofed 1854. The church society now occupies a new building.

New Church and Ruins of Old at Heptonstall

The old church as it now appears in ruins. An effort is being made by the church society to preserve these standing walls and funds for the purpose are solicited. The old yard about the church is filled with the bodies of the dead and many of them are Greenwoods. The new church of Heptonstall society is shown in the background; the free school founded by Lord Charles Greenwood, 1642, is on the extreme right.

the wives by his three marriages and those of his children are also given.

A John Greenwood, of Cottingly, as shown by a deed dated Feb. 20, 1598, left the sum of £40 to be lent from year to year for ever, to the poor of Heptonstall parish and £20 to the poor of Bradford-dale. Paul Greenwood of Old Town, Wadsworth, left 20 shilling a year for the poor people of Wadsworth and 20 shillings a year for the minister at Heptonstall.

John Greenwood, of the Learings, in Heptonstall, by his will dated Feb. 10, 1687, left an annuity of 20s. for the minister of Heptonstall Church and one of 20s. for the purpose of apprenticing a poor man's child.

John Greenwood, of the Hippings, in Stansfield, by will dated Dec. 13, 1705, left 20s. yearly forever to the minister at Heptonstall for the preaching of a sermon the first Wednesday in August yearly.

Referring to the number of Greenwoods now living in Heptonstall vicinity a public writer says: "In the Calderdale district, from Halifax to Todmorden, the number of Greenwoods is positively amazing. One cannot take up a newspaper, or attend some public or social function, or visit the homes of the people, but the name of Greenwood stands out in numbers almost like the stars in the firmament; and when one remembers that all these came from that original stock found at Greenwood, in Heptonstall, some centuries ago the thought cannot fail to be brimful of significance."

ANCIENT GREENWOOD WILLS

The very earliest Greenwood wills recorded at York, Eng., are the following, which are interesting as showing the great variety in the spelling of the name, and they also throw light upon the method of living in those early years. The number of persons bearing the Christian names of John, James, William and Thomas in the Greenwood family is remarkable. "Sir"* in these wills denotes a clergyman. The recording of wills at York began in 1389.

*The word Sir is taken from the French Sieur, meaning master, Lord and is an honorary term early given to clergymen.

†It was an old scriptural practice for persons in their wills to give directions respecting the place of burial. Joseph "gave commandment concerning his bones" [Heb. XI, 21].

GREENWOOD LEE

The oldest of the ancient homes of Greenwood, Heptonstall, Eng. These buildings of stone have been standing since about the year 1400 and cover the site of buildings, probably bearing same name, erected about the year 1154. It was on this spot that the person lived who became the progenitor of the English Greenwood family and around this spot, then a forest, was built the little settlement which took the name of Greenwood and gave to the people living here the Greenwood surname. High Greenwood and the Clough house, two other Greenwood ancestral homes, near by, were each rebuilt 100 years ago. They had each been standing since the year 1260. When taken down they were crumbling, weather beaten stone structures. Greenwood Lee is a farmstead, well preserved for its great age, and is occupied by Mrs. M. E. Gibson (widow of Abraham), and her son Abraham. The estate, now besides the buildings here shown, embraces the farmsteads known as New Greenwood Lee and Acre, both a little way down the road. The former was established about 100 years ago and the buildings of Acre erected soon after 1439. The Greenwood Lee estate extends down the valley to the river, a fall of 300 feet, where stand the Greenwood Lee and High Greenwood woods. Originally Greenwood Lee estate embraced all the district known as Greenwood, extending from Stoneshey Gate to Widdop Gate, a distance of 1½ miles, and from the moor to the river, ¾ of a mile.

Richard Grenewod, of Heptonstall, junior, deceased, on Jun. 9, 1525, a commission was directed to the Dean of Pontefract to prove the will.

The will of John Greenwood, of Greenwood Lee, dated Sept. 22, 1552. He was son of James Greenwood and had a brother and son named James and other children named Robert, Henry, John, Lancelott and Christabell. His wife was named Jenet. His children were young and were placed under guardianship of his father, James Greenwood. John Greenwood, of Colden, was another relative, also Thomas Greenwood, of Learing. He places his inward and outward debts in the hands of John Greenwood, of Colden, and Thomas Greenwood, of Learing. Testator devises a certain amount of timber about Greenwood Lee and Clough House to Sir Robert Bentley and James Greenwood, his son, and other of his children. To his brother James he bequeaths timber for one house. His executors were Robert, John Henry, Lancelott and Christabel, his children, under care of James Greenwood, father of testator, until they come of age. Witnesses—Richard Horsfall, John Greenwood, Laurence Bentley, Adam Farrar and John Soothill. Will proved Nov. 3, 1552.

On Febr. 3, 1553, Thomas Greenwood, of Greenwood Lee, made his will. He was son of William Greenwood and brother of John Greenwood, of Colden. His wife was named Margaret and they had one son named John both of whom he makes his executors. Evidently there was some relationship with the Sutcliffes, of Mayroyd, for he leaves to Alice Sutcliffe one best cow and to her sister, Grace, two cows, and in addition £6. 10s. 2d. the value of a debt due to him from John Sutcliffe, of Mayroyd, their brother. He also gave to William Sutcliffe, his servent, "a pair of lomes and a lether dublet." Witnesses—Sir Gilbert Stansfield, curate of Heptonstall, William Mitchell, Nicholas Whitaker, William Shackleton, Robert Eland. Proved Sept. 3, 1554 by the exors.

The will of John Greenwood, of Mixenden, near Halifax, dated June 30, 1556, proved May 20, 1557, mentions his children Wil-

To William, his elder son, he gave one red cow, one iron chimney, his best jacket, 2 carts, 2 shoulder irons and half of one bed and bedstocks, William to "bring me furth at my departing as shal beseme him and also to paie to John Sugden xiiij s. and to Rich. Mawde iij s. iiij d." To John Greenwood, his younger son he gave one white horse and half a bed with all his other raiment, one cart and wheels with irons pins and one wheelbarrow. "I geve Jenet Grenewoode, my daughter, one yron chimney." He desired to be buried in the churchyard at Halifax.

Dec. 1, 1551, James Grenewod, in parish of Heptonstall, wills: To be buried in the chapel or church yard of Heptonstall and to the Vicar thereof my mortuary after the King's gracious acts. "Itm. I geve to Agnes, my doughter, a nambrey,* an arke, my best brasse pott, over and besides hir porcon or childe partte. Item. I geve to Willm. and John, my sonnes, ij brass pottes, an arke, and a cheste. Item. I geve to Margaret, my wife and the said Agnes, oure doughter, all my householde stuffe belonging to the shelfe. Itm. I geve to the said Willm. and John, my sonnes, my lomes with all suche things to them belonging. The residue of all my other goodes, chattells, and dettes I geve to Margaret, my wife, Willm., John and Agnes Grenewod, our children, whom I ordeyne and maike my trewe executors to dispose of as they think good. Thes witnes, Thomas Grenewod, Thomas Hole. Pr. Feby. 5, 1551, by the exors."

*"Nambrey" was probably a book of names or family register of births, marriages and deaths. The spelling of our forefathers was peculiar as compared with present day methods. "Nam," the first syllable of the word, may have come from the Anglo-Saxon word Nama, meaning name. "Brey" may have been taken from the Anglo-Saxon word Braco, signifying breath, vapor, fragrance or odor. With this attachment nambrey would appear to be a book of names with fragrant odors.

EXECUTION OF JOHN GREENWOOD

It will be of interest to every Greenwood to learn of the execution in England of John Greenwood as a Puritan. He was a graduate of Cambridge University in England, a clergyman in the Established Church, and the very first to separate from that church and found the religious doctrine known as Puritanism or Congregationalism. He labored for simplicity of religious forms. Seven years he suffered the privations of close prison confinement and finally on the sixth of April, 1593, with his co-worker, Henry Barrowe, was taken from jail and hanged. That little band of Pilgrims that landed at Plymouth, Mass., in 1620, were his followers—they had worshipped at the church he founded—that band of Puritans that landed in America and founded Boston were believers in the doctrine he was first to teach. The religious teachings of John Greenwood rapidly spread in England and in 1640 occurred the civil war in which the Puritans under Oliver Cromwell as leader overthrew the English church and government and established in England the right of the Puritans to existence in that country. Persecution of the Puritans ceased for a time in England after Cromwell established himself as ruler of that country. But that little band of Pilgrims at Plymouth, that band of Puritans at Boston, those followers who wended their way to Virginia and Maryland—they brought to America the teachings of John Greenwood—the separation of church and state—and if America owes its greatness, its progress, and its achievements to one principle in government more than another it is that in America every American can kneel at the altar of his own faith, and worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience. The state in America is separated from the church. American government tolerates no single form of religious worship but shelters and protects alike all. John Greenwood taught that there could be but one head to the church and that head was not the Queen but Christ, and that there could be no law for the government of the church other than what the Scriptures contained. The execution of John Greenwood was in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

John Greenwood, b. 1556, entered Corpus Christie (or Benet) College, Cambridge, Mar. 18, 1577-8, a thealogical student, received his Bachelor's degree 1580-1, was ordained deacon of the English Established Church by the Bishop of London and priest by the Bishop of Lincoln, and for 5 years labored in the English Church, in Norfolk County. What led to a change in his religious belief is unknown but he was deprived of his benefice and began holding secret religious services at the home of Lord Robert Rich, of Rockford, Essex County, who was interested in his doctrine. Soon Lord Rich and a clergyman named Robert Wright, who was associated with John Greenwood, were arrested and thrown into prison. Mr. Greenwood then went to London where he formed a secret congregation at the house of one Henry Martin at St. Andrews. Here, early in October, 1586, he was arrested and lodged in the Clink prison while conducting a service.

There had preceded Greenwood at Cambridge by a little more than 10 years a man of marked ability, by name of Henry Barrowe, third son of Thomas Barrowe, Esq., of Shipdam, Norfolk, by his second wife, Mary. He entered Cambridge Nov. 22, 1565, receiving his degree of Bachelor of Arts 1569-70, became a lawyer and practiced in Her Majesty's courts. He had become interested in the religious teachings of John Greenwood, and hearing of Greenwood's arrest he visited Greenwood on Sunday, Nov. 19, 1586, between 9 and 10 o'clock, at the Clink. Here with no pretense of legal warrant Barrowe was arrested and locked in with Greenwood. A few days later both Greenwood and Barrowe were removed to the Fleet prison, where their quarters were close, and deprived of proper food, sufficient warmth and many necessities of life they were kept in confinement for 7 years. Many times during their imprisonment Greenwood and Barrowe were taken before the authorities of the English Church and questioned as to their religious belief. Such an examination of Greenwood took place first at the palace (1586) before the Bishop of London. Asked by the Bishop if he believed in baptism, Greenwood replied that he did. Asked if he did not have a son unbaptized, Greenwood replied that his son Abel, 1½ years old, was unbaptized, but that he had been in prison and was unable to take his son to a reformed church where he could be baptized according to God's ordinance. Asked if he did not consider the English Church a church of God replied, "No." Mr. Greenwood told the Bishop that every congregation of Christ should be governed by a pastor, teacher and elder and by no other than that Christ appoints. He would excommunicate the Prince (Queen) as well as all members of the church who disobeyed the teachings of the word of God. He would make no exception of the Prince. "The Scriptures set down sufficient laws for the worship of God and government of church which no man may add to or diminish. Her Majesty is not the supreme head of the church."

Barrowe's first examination was on the afternoon of his arrest before the Archbishop, Archdeacon and Doctor Cosin. He protested stoutly against his arrest without a warrant but to no effect. An effort was made to bind Barrowe by an oath to attend the Established Church, but he refused to take the oath. Eight days afterwards, 27 November, Barrowe was taken to Lambert before a synod of bishops and a dean, when a long sheet of accusations was read against him. He admitted that much of the matter was true but not all, and demanded that witnesses against him should be sworn, whereupon Whitgift (head of Corpus Christie College), losing his temper, burst out "Where is his keeper? You shall not prattle here. Away with him. Clap him up close. Let no man go to him. I will make him tell another tale yer I have done with him."

On the 9th of March, 1589, Archdeacon Hutchinson visited Mr. Greenwood at the Fleet, saying he had come by virtue of a commission from Her Majesty to confer. Mr. Greenwood declined to have anything to say until he could have pen and ink and a fellow prisoner as a witness of the conversation, on the ground that he had been wickedly slandered and his cause falsely reported by the bishops and especially by one Dr. Some. The pen, ink and witness being granted, the archdeacon read some questions, mainly as to whether a church made up of members who were called together by the blowing of Her Majesty's trumpet, received into the church without conversion and repentance and consisting of all sorts of profane people could be considered a true church of Christ. Very little progress was made at the interview and when the archdeacon went away he insisted on carrying with him all the notes that had been taken of what passed. He was prevailed upon to leave them in the hands of Mr. Calthop, the witness, but Mr. Greenwood says: "No sooner was I gone and locked up than the wardens were sent to the gentleman for the papers, who, declining to deliver them without our consent, the archbishop's servant came and took them away."

Eight days after this, Mar. 17, 1589, the archdeacon came to see Mr. Greenwood again, bringing a witness of his own and having the doors locked upon them with no other person present except the two turnkeys of the jail, one of whom acted as scribe. On this occasion the argument was mainly upon the question whether John the Baptist received to his baptism those Pharisees and Sadducees whom he called generations of vipers, the archdeacon insisting that he did and Mr. Greenwood contending that while the vipers may have been present they took no part in the baptism, except as onlookers.

In one interview the archdeacon had with Mr. Barrowe, the latter complained of his many years of illegal imprisonment and close confinement and was told by the archdeacon that "You should be most happy, for the solitary and contemplative I hold the most blessed life; it's the life I would choose." Mr. Barrowe meekly replied: "Could you be content, Mr. Andrews, to be kept from exercise and air for so long a time, matters so necessray to a natural body?" "I say not," was the answer, "that I would want air."

In an interview, Apr. 13, 1589, between Greenwood and Barrowe and clergymen of the English church, the prisoners state, "Things were disorderly handled and there were manifold cavils and shifts, shameless denials of manifest truths, and most unchristian contumelies, scoffs and reproaches against our persons." It ended with Greenwood and Barrowe being required to set down in brief the reasons why they persisted in refusing to return to the Church of England, which they did in these words:

That the people of the church, as they stand, are not orderly to the faith, but stand mingled together in confusion.

The ministry set over the people is not the true ministry of the gospel which Christ has appointed.

The administrations and worship of the church are not according to the word of God.

The ecclesiastical government, officers and canons are not according to the testament of Christ and are anti-christian and popish.

That the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper as administered in the Established Church are not true sacraments.

That infants ought not be baptized according to the form of baptism now in the Church of England.

That it is not lawful to use the Lord's prayer publicly in the church for a set form of prayer.

That all set and stinted prayers are merely babblings in the sight of the Lord and not to be used in public Christian assemblies.

That the public prayers and worship of God in England as it is done in the Established Church is false, superstitious, popish and not to be used in any Christian congregation.

While in prison both Greenwood and Barrowe wrote several books which were produced under difficulties that would have crushed the spirit of men of weaker fibre and inferior courage. Denied proper writing material they used such scraps of paper and bits of material as was secretly brought to them by friends from the outside. When one piece of paper was written over it was taken away and another piece as secretly furnished. These pieces of paper were taken to Holland where the writing was put into print and the books published. The Holland printers had to make what they could of the writing, but on the whole they did their work fairly well. These books treated of the religious belief of Greenwood and Barrowe and contained the interviews between them and the English Church officers, and although 300 years have passed since their publication, some of these books are yet found.

In the autumn of 1592, for some reason not apparent, there was a relaxation of the rigor with which Greenwood was treated and he was allowed to leave the Fleet, either on bail or on his personal promise to appear when required, and he went to live with Roger Rippon, in Southwalk. Barrowe remained in jail. Rippon's house was one of those at which the members of a secret church, formed by Mr. Greenwood four or five years before had held its meetings. Mr. Greenwood, now that he was out of prison, met with these people, and was appointed their doctor or teacher, but the bishops were alarmed by what they heard of the spread of Separatism and on Dec. 5, 1892, Mr. Greenwood was again arrested and committed again to the Fleet with Barrowe. This time he was arrested at the home of Edward Boyse on Ludgate Hill.

On March 23, 1593, Greenwood and Barrowe were brought to trial at the Old Bailey in London. They were charged with publishing and dispensing seditious books; the proofs of the charge were found in the writings which they had published while in prison. Their sedition consisted in denying Her Majesty's ecclesiastical supremacy and attacking the existing ecclesiastical order. On the 3d, 11th and 20th of March Barrowe had been cited before Chief Justice Sir John Popham and Attorney General Lord Ellesmere and examined as to his opinions and his authorship of certain books. Barrowe avowed his convictions of the truth of his treatises and among other things expressed his opinion that the established government of the Church of England was unlawful and anti-christian.

Greenwood had been examined on the 11th and 20th and confessed to his authorship of the books laid to his charge. Robert Bowle and Robert Stokes examined and testified on the 19th as to the way the books of Greenwood and Barrowe had been printed. Daniel Studley and James Forster testified to the printing also of the books. The latter, who described himself as a physician and master of arts, confessed having written some part of the Greenwood's and Barrowe's book entitled "A Brief Description of the False Church."

The answers of Greenwood and Barrowe at the trial was a general denial of the charges brought against them but they were found guilty and sentenced to be hanged.

The next morning, March 24, 1593, preparations were made for their execution but they were reprieved. Certain doctors and deans were then sent to the prisoners to confer with them but the prisoners claimed an open or public discussion, which was refused them. On the 31st of March the prisoners were conveyed to the place of execution very early and secretly, where being tied by the neck to the tree, were permitted to speak a few words. They declared their innocence of all malice or ill intent and exhorted the people to obey and love the Queen and magistrates but to follow their leaders no further than they followed Scripture. They were then in the act of praying for the Queen when they were again reprieved. This time as the result of a supplication to the Lord Treasurer that "in a land where no Papist was put to death for religion, theirs should not be the first blood shed who disagreed about faith with what was professed in the country," and desired conference to be convinced of their error. But only six days was gained by this clemency.

The law that Greenwood and Barrowe were convicted under did not well apply in their case and the prelates having introduced a bill into Parliament that would apply were much alarmed when the bill came down to the Commons with its modifications and lest the prisoners should escape execution they were secretly and early on the morning of Apr. 6, 1593, taken to Tyburn and there hanged without ceremony.

After the death of Greenwood and Barrowe, Parliament of England enacted a law "To Retain the Queen Majesty's subjects in Their Due Obedience" which read: "That if any person over 16 years of age shall be absent from church for a month, or by writing, printing or speech shall attempt to persuade any of her Majesty's subjects to deny the Queen's ecclesiastical supremacy or shall attempt to persuade them from coming to church or shall be present at any unlawful meeting for religious worship they shall be committed to prison without bail until they conform and make submission. If for 3 months they refuse to conform they are to be banished from the realm. If they fail to leave the country or return without license they are to be hanged as felons."

Immediately after the passage of this act most of the Separatist prisoners were released from jail and several hundred of them streamed to Holland. Among the first that fled were the members of the secret church in London of which John Greenwood had been pastor. They crossed the sea in separate companies as they were able and within three or four years most of them had settled in Amsterdam. At one time 56 members of John Greenwood's secret church, while holding a service among the sand hills at Islington, were surprised and arrested. They were "committed without neither meat, drink, fry or lodgings, nor were their friends allowed to have access to them; husbands and wives were purposely put into different prisons; some had not a penny about them, so that not only they but their poor families were in wretched cause. All was contrary to law etiquette and conscience."

On May 22, 1593, John Penry, a graduate of Cambridge University and a member of John Greenwood's secret congregation, was hanged at St. Thomas Waterings in London. Gov. Bradford, in his "Dialogue," gives these additional names of Puritans who were publicly executed—William Dennis at Thetford, Norfolk, and John and Elias Coppin at Bury St. Edmunds. A great many Puritans who were committed to jail died in prison. Some were horse whipped, some branded with hot irons and some kept in chains.

John Greenwood's definition of a church was: A company of faithful people separated from the unbelievers and heathen of the land, gathered in the name of Christ, whom they truly worship and readily obey as their only king, priest and prophet, joined together as members of one body, ordered and governed by such officers and laws as Christ in his will and testament hath hereunto obeyed.

It is interesting to notice how John Greenwood and members of the church he founded struck upon some of the simple forms of religious observance that have remained characteristic of the Congregational Church to this day: One Daniel Buck, a writing master, deposed 9 March, 1593, that when he joined the company "he made ye protestation that he would walk with the rest and yt so long as they did walk in the way of the Lorde and as farr as might be warranted by the word of God; that Greenwood took water and washed the faces of them that were baptised saying onely in ye administration of the sacrament 'I do baptise the in ye name of the Father, of the Son and of the Holy Ghost and without Godfather and Godmother'; and that at the Lord's supper five white loaves or more were sett upon ye table and that the pastor did break ye bread and then deliver it unto some of them and the deacons delivered to the rest, some of sd congregation sitting and some standing about the table and that the pastor delivered the cup unto one and he unto another till they had all drank using the words at ye delivery thereof according as is set down in the eleventh of Cor. ye 24 verse."

Henry Barrowe was unmarried and a man of some property, which he willed to the Puritan Church at his death. His money paid for the printing of the religious works he and Mr. Greenwood wrote in prison.

The execution of John Greenwood at Tyborn is recorded on the records of Corpus Christie College, Cambridge, Eng., and the offence is given as "writing against the Book of Common Prayer."

After the imprisonment of John Greenwood, one Francis Johnson became pastor of the Greenwood church in London and when the members fled to Holland he became pastor of the Amsterdam Puritan Church.

The Rev. John Greenwood was son of James Greenwood by his second wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Edward Mawde. His grandfather, Thomas Greenwood, m. Margaret, dau. of Thomas Draper of Brodelsthom. Rev. John Greenwood m. and his only child was Abel, b. 1585, who was grandfather of Thomas Greenwood, who settled in Newton, Mass., 1665.

GREENWOODS IN HOLLAND

The famous little vessel, Mayflower, which landed its cargo of 102 Pilgrims from Holland at Plymouth, Mass., in Dec., 1620, had no person by name of Greenwood on board, yet the State records in the archives of Leyden, Amsterdam and Rotterdam show the presence of Greenwoods among the Puritans who had separated from the established church and fled from England to Holland to escape persecution. The exodus of these religious people from England begun immediately following the execution of Rev. John Greenwood at Tyburn, in 1593, and was continued to 1612 or later. From the Amsterdam records we learn of a William Greenwood, from Norwich, whose betrothal to Rachel Pettes is recorded on Nov. 24, 1617, Sam. Singleton and Robt. and Margaret Hopkins being witnesses. No record of marriage is found.

The Leyden records tell of a John Greenwood, from London, who matriculated in philosophy at Leyden University July 9, 1625, aged 20. He was then living in the family of John Keble, from Canterbury, a wool comber. The records show his betrothal to Bridget Robinson May 10, 1629, with witnesses Sam. Lee, a hat maker, Thomas Nash, Eliz. Nash and Bridget Robinson, mother of the bride. The marriage occurred May 26, 1629. The marriage record says he "is a young man from the Brownists' camp." As the Puritans in Holland were called Brownists the locality where they lived may have been known as Brownists' Camp. This John Greenwood matriculated in theology at Leyden University May 22, 1634, aged 28, and was then yet living with John Keble. Bridget Robinson, whom John Greenwood m., was daughter and second child of Rev. John Robinson, pastor of the Puritan church in Leyden. This church, a prosperous body of English refugees, numbered 300 members. The name Brigdet was formerly common among English women. Even Oliver Cromwell, the Puritan leader of England, begun his letters to his wife with "Dear Biddie." The Leyden records show Bridget Robinson Greenwood to have m. 2d, William Lee, of Amsterdam, July 25, 1637. The national council of American Congregational Churches have a tablet erected in Leyden to the memory of Rev. John Robinson, the father of Bridget, and of the Pilgrims who came to America in 1620, nearly all were from Rev. John Robinson's church. There were two Puritan churches in Amsterdam at same time.

The Leyden records disclose also the marriage of Lacharian

Greenwood, Sept., 1647, to Jannetie Bruynal, a girl from Colchester. A son was b. to this couple Apr. 3, 1657. Mr. Greenwood had some difficulty with the magistrates about this, a second marriage.

Amsterdam records show the death of Anna Greenwood Jan., 1636, as wife of Paul Diers de Ras. Her first husband was a Mr. Schas.

Rotterdam records show the baptism of Thomas Groenewont (Greenwood) Dec. 31, 1647. His marriage is recorded as having occurred in 1676.

From Rotterdam records it appears that Francis Greenwood, an Englishman and merchant, was m. 1671. His family consisted of a wife and two daughters.

SOME NOTABLE GREENWOODS

John Greenwood, a school teacher, matriculated as a pensioner of St. Johns College, Cambridge, Eng., in 1559. Obtained his B. A. degree in 1561 and M. A. degree in 1565. Was master of the grammar school at Brentwood, Essex, Eng., where he died at an advanced age in 1609. His only work was, "Syntaxis et prosodia, Versiculis Compositar," published in Cambridge, Eng., 1590.

James Greenwood, grammarian, was for a time usher to Benjamin Morland, at Hackney, Eng., but soon after 1711 opened a boarding school at Woodford in Essex, Eng.; later was master of St. Paul's School, London, which position he held until his death, 12 Sept., 1737. He left a widow, Susannah. Was author of "An Essay Toward a Practical English Grammar, Describing the Genius and Nature of the English Tongue"; 12 mo., London, 1711; 2d edition 1722, 3d edition 1729, 5th edition 1753. Afterwards he published an abridgement under the title of "The Royal English Grammar," which he dedicated to the Princess of Wales. The 4th edition of this appeared in 1750 and an eighth edition 1770. He also wrote "The London Vocabulary," English and Latin, put into a new method proper to acquaint the learner with things as well as pure Latin words, adorned with 26 pictures. His last work was "Virgin Muse."

John Greenwood, b. in Boston, Mass., Dec. 7, 1727, a portrait painter, son of Samuel Greenwood, a merchant, by his second wife, Mary Chamock, and a nephew of Prof. Isaac Greenwood of Harvard College, a descendant of Miles Greenwood of Norwich, Eng. In 1742 was apprenticed to Thomas Johnson, an artist in water color, heraldric painting, engraving and japanning. In 1752 was with the Dutch Colony of Surinam, where he remained five years, executing in that time 133 portraits which brought him 8025 guilders. In 1758 he studied in Amsterdam and was instrumental in establishing there the Academy of Art. In 1763 he permanently settled in London, Eng., and became a member of the incorporated "Society of Artists of Great Britain." Among his distinguished works of art are: "Frans Von Mieris and Wife," "A Gipsy Fortune Teller," painting of "Pallmon and Laviner," and a large landscape representing the "Seven Sisters." He died at Margate, Eng., 16 Sept., 1792. His wife, who survived him a few years, was buried at Chiswick, close to the tomb of J. Hogarth. His oldest son, Chesnock Gladwin, died an officer in the army at Grenada, West Indies; his second son, John, succeeded him in business. James, another son, returned to Boston and the youngest son, Capt. Samuel Adam Greenwood, senior assistant at the residuary in Baroda, died at Cambray in 1811.

Frederick Greenwood, London, Eng., author, journalist and well known publicist, originator and first editor of Pall Mall Gazette, founded St. James Gazette, which he edited several years. Publications: "Louis Napoleon Bonapart, Emperor of the French," 1853; "Life of Napoleon the Third," 1855. "The Lovers' Lexicon; Imagination in Dreams and their study." He died in London, 1909.

George Granville Greenwood of Middle Temple, Eng., barrister-at-law and member of English House of Commons since 1906; b. Jan. 3, 1850, second son of late John Greenwood, for many years solicitor of the English Treasury, and late Fanny H. Welch, daughter of William Collyns of Starcross, Devon; m. 1879 Laurentia Trent, daughter of late L. T. Comberbatch, M.D. Was educated at Trinity College. Publications: "The Shakespeare Problem Restated," 1908, and "In re Shakespeare," 1909. An uncle of George Granville Greenwood, now deceased, (Colonel George Greenwood) commanded the second Life Guards of England and was Silver Stick in Waiting to King William IV (1830-1837). He wrote "Hints on Horsemanship" and "Rain and Rivers."

John Greenwood, jurist, b. in Providence, R. I., Nov. 6, 1789, moved with his parents to New York State at age of 10 years. Studied Latin, Greek, French and English preparatory for college, but did not enter. Studied law with Aaron Burr in New York City, but completed his law studies in office of Eli King. Admitted to the bar Oct., 1819, and opened an office on Nassau Street, near Maiden Lane. In 1823 removed to Brooklyn though his business was maintained in New York City till 1837, when his Brooklyn practice so increased that he gave up the New York office. Rendered great service in obtaining the Brooklyn city charter. Was Corporation Counsel 1842 but appointed judge of Kings County Court the following year, having served several years as Supreme Court Commissioner and Master of Chancery. He m. 1st, 1822, Catherine Dobbin, of New York, who died 12 years after, leaving two sons and one daughter; 2d in 1836, to Miss Lammer, of German extraction. She d. 1881, leaving three daughters and two sons. Judge Greenwood d. Dec. 11, 1887, in the 90th years of his age.

Hamar Greenwood, barrister-at-law and member of English House of Commons since 1906. His parents moved from England to Whitby, Canada, where he was b., 1870, but returned again to England. Son of John Hamar Greenwood, barrister-at-law, and Charlotte Hubbard. Was educated at public schools of Whitby and received A. B. degree at Toronto University. Was some time in department of agriculture of Ontario. Present address St. James Court, Buckingham Gate, S. W., Eng.

Miles Greenwood, proprietor of Eagle Iron Works, Cincinnati, Ohio, b. in Jersey City, N. J., 19 Mar., 1807, a descendant of Miles Greenwood of Norwich, Eng., through his son Samuel of Boston, d. in Cincinnati 6 Nov. 1885. He removed with his parents to Ohio in 1817 and in 1832 established on the Miami Canal the largest iron works in the West. During the Civil War the works were employed in behalf of the Federal government. He built machines that rifled 3,000 smooth bore muskets in a day and cast 150 bronz field guns in a brief period. A turret monitor was also built there. The works were three times set on fire but not destroyed.

One of the oldest manufacturing concerns now in England is that of William Greenwood, Jr., spinner and manufacturer at Oxenhope, under the present management of Jas. Frederick Greenwood and younger brother. The firm was established in 1761 by a Greenwood and has been in continuous operation by Greenwoods since that date. The line of goods made is fine cloth for gentlemen's suits.

Daniel Greenwood, b. Sowerby, Eng., 1602, a man of great natural ability, was made fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford, and later, 1648, was appointed Principal of the College. In 1649 the degree of D. D. was conferred upon him and in 1651 he was made Vice Chancellor of the University. He took an active part in aid of the Parliamentary party in England and when the King was restored to the throne he was ejected from his connection with the college. He retired to private life at Studley, in Oxfordshire, and after the death of his wife he lived with his nephew, Rev. Daniel Greenwood, rector of Steeple-Ashton, near Dedington, in Oxfordshire. He was buried in the chancel of the church at Steeple-Ashton and a tablet is placed there to his memory.

Rev. Daniel Greenwood, son of John, b. at Sowerby, Eng., 1626, was a widely known and distinguished clergyman and nephew of Daniel Greenwood, Principal of Brasenose College, Oxford. In 1653 he became rector of Steeple-Ashton, in Oxfordshire, where he labored till time of his death, which was from apoplexy, Oct. 14, 1679, aged 53. A tablet to his memory is placed in his church.

FIRST GREENWOODS IN AMERICA

The first person by name of Greenwood to settle in America, so far as obtainable records show, was John Greenwood. English shipping lists show him to have been 16 years old; that he sailed from the port of London, Jan., 1634, on the ship Bonaventure, James Ricrofte, master. He settled in Virginia and has descendants who are mentioned in this work.

The earliest Greenwood to settle in New England was Nathaniel. He was from Norwich, Eng., and was a son of Miles Greenwood, a worsted weaver of Norwich, where he was baptized at the chapel of St. Michael-at-Pleas, Aug. 23, 1631. He came to this country as early as 1654, then 23 years of age, and on Jan. 24, 1655, at Weymouth, Mass., m. Mary, the daughter of Samuel Allen of Braintree, Mass. He engaged in ship building in Boston, Mass., and for 30 years successfully pursued that occupation, his death occurring, as appears from his tombstone now standing in Copp's Hill Cemetery, Boston, July 31, 1684, aged 53. He left a widow and three children and considerable property.

On Nov. 3, 1659, as appears from Dorchester, Mass., early records, one Alice Greenwood was m. to Robert Portis (probably Porteous), the ceremony being performed by Major Humphrey Atherton, a magistrate of Dorchester. Court records show this Robert to have been a witness to the will, signed Nov. 27, 1645, of one Lawrence Buckminister, a seaman, about sailing on a voyage. Robert was a Scotch tobacconist and first Treasurer of the Scots' Charitable Society, Boston, Mass., organized 6 Jan., 1657. He died a widower. Alice was probably a sister of Thomas Greenwood of Newton and daughter of Thomas Greenwood of Heptonstall, Eng. Whether she came to this country with friends or her father is a matter of conjecture. If her father was ever in New England he left no record. A will of a Robert Porteous, dated Boston June 22, 1681, proved July 28, 1681 (Suffolk county, Mass., deeds), bequeaths his soul to God, his body to earth, his bones to rottenness and says that he shall be raised up again the last day and with these eyes behold his Saviour. He gives 10 pounds to Daniel Brewer and 5 pounds to Nathaniel Brewer, both of whom he calls brother and dear friend, and remainder of his estate he gives to Hannah, his daughter, and her husband, John Weld. Evidently he had but one child and as Alice was not mentioned she may have died before the will was made. Hannah Porteous, Roxbury, Mass., records show, m. Jan. 22, 1678, John Weld, a glazier, of Roxbury, b. June 26, 1653, son of John and Margaret (Bowen) Weld and grandson of Captain Joseph Weld, who came to America in 1635. Their children were: Hannah (Weld), b. Dec. 14, 1681, d. Oct. 6, 1683; John (Welb), b. Oct. 7, 1683; Joanna (Weld), b. Sept. 15, 1685, m. Samuel Lyon; Abigail (Weld), b. Aug. 19, 1687; Elizabeth (Weld), b. June 20, 1692; Sarah (Weld), b. Nov. 17, 1693, d. Jan. 16, 1708; Dorothy (Weld), b. June 21, 1695, m. William Dennison; Samuel (Weld), b. May 18, 1697.

About 1665 there appeared in Boston, Mass., one Thomas Greenwood, aged 22, and one Samuel Greenwood, aged 21. Samuel Greenwood was brother of Nathaniel, above mentioned, and son of Miles of Norwich, Eng. He remained in Boston and engaged in shipbuilding; was a public spirited man, often holding office in the gift of the town's people, and at his death, Aug., 1711, left a large property in Boston which was divided among his widow and four children.

Thomas Greenwood was by occupation a weaver. He remained in Boston a short time, then removed to Weymouth, Mass., and finally settled in Cambridge Village, now Newton, Mass., a short distance from Boston. He was son of Thomas Greenwood of Heptonstall, Eng., and possibly brother of Alice, above mentioned. He was baptized at Heptonstall (Eng.) Parish Church June 4, 1643. His grandfather was Abel Greenwood, who was son of Rev. John Greenwood, the Puritan separatist who suffered death for his religious convictions at Tyburn, Eng., Apr. 6, 1593. Thomas Greenwood was an educated, intelligent man whose judgment was often sought by his neighbors and held town office. At his death, Sept. 1, 1693, he left an estate to a second wife and four children.

Aside from the four Greenwoods last mentioned there are no records of other Greenwoods permanently settling in New England for nearly 100 years, or until 1760. The will of Nathaniel Greenwood (Suffolk County, Mass., records) mentions his cousin Benjamine who is to have £5 when "his time is out," but no record being found of this Benjamine he evidently returned to England after serving his apprenticeship. Of the Greenwoods now in America full 65 per cent are descendents of Thomas of Newton, 5 per cent descendants of Nathaniel and Samuel, and 30 per cent descendants of John of Virginia, or are later arrivals.

Early English shipping lists contain these items: Robert Greenwood, age 18, sailed Nov. 20, 1635, port of London to Barbadoes, ship, Expedition, Peter Blackler, master; was examined as to his conformity to the discipline of the church of England.

Thomas Greenwood, aged 15, sailed Apr. 3, 1635, Gravesend to St. Christopher, ship, Paul of London, J. Acklin, master. The minister of St. Katherins certified that "he had been examined as to his conformity to the discipline and orders of ye church of England and he did take ye oath of allegiance."

John Greenwood, aged 26, sailed Jan. 6, 1634, to St. Christopher and the Barbadoes after taking ye oath of allegiance. Records of the parish of St. Michaels, Barbadoes, show the death of a John Greenwood in 1679.

IN GENERAL

BOOKS OF INTEREST

Two books of exceeding interest are in the hands of Francis A. Thayer, 38 Park Row, New York City. Both are of old print and have come down from the sons of Thomas[1] Greenwood to the present generation. One of these books is entitled, "Commentaries on the Lamentations of Jeremiah," London, 1602, in which is written the autograph avowedly of "Rev. Thomas Greenwood, his book, 1714." and under "John Greenwood, 1720" and on another fly leaf—"Jno Greenwood's ex Doro patris" without date. The autographs are in a handsome hand. There is also written: "Noah Greenwood, 1786."

Another book, "The Sermons of Christian Religion Delivered by Zacharias," has written on the fly leaf: "Abiah Carpenter, his book the 25th April 1659." "Jno Greenwood, his book, bought of Capt Butterworth, Jan'y 8, 1724." (Same fine hand as the other book.) "Oliver Greenwood, his book, January 1783." (In an uncultured hand.)

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS

The Rev. Thomas[2] Greenwood made this entry on one of his parish registers at Rehoboth, Mass.:

"My honrd father Dyed (Friday) Sep^{r} 1st, 1693, In y^{e} evening."

In March, 1770, there was a tide waiter named Thos. Greenwood, in Boston, who fired on the populace from a Custom House window at the time of the Bloody Massacre. He was accused of having killed Crispus Attucks, but the jury decided that soldiers of the 29th Regiment were the guilty parties. It is not learned that this Thomas was a New England resident.

There are 33 towns in the United States and Canada bearing the name of Greenwood. They derived their names from the woodland or forest that were prominent where the places are located.

The word Boisvert, which means greenwood (bois—wood, vert—green) is in very common use in France as a surname and whereever the French language is spoken.

Among the Germans there is a word written Gruenwald, which is used as a surname and the word has the same significance as the family name Greenwood.

It is remarkable with the Greenwood family how the Christian names James, John, Thomas and William were maintained and have been passed down from one generation to another. The Greenwood wills recorded at York are alive with these names, while the church registers at Heptonstall and all other public documents are so full that positive identification of individuals bearing these names is difficult. Even Thomas Greenwood, who settled at Newton, Mass., 1665, gave his own four sons these same names. In the parish church registers at Heptonstall, in the list of marriages, we find, July 15, 1641, a Thomas Greenwood married Sarah Crossley; Oct. 15, 1641, a Thomas Greenwood married Ellen Wood and then Apr. 30, 1642, a Thomas Greenwood married Sarah Sutcliffe. Here is a further illustration of the frequency of that one name Thomas: In 1700, in the Wragby parish register, a Thomas Greenwood is mentioned as curate. In 1703 a Thomas Greenwood was curate of Lightcliffe; 1706 a Thomas Greenwood was curate of Luddenden; 1712 a Thomas Greenwood, A.B., was curate of Heptonstall and held that position until 1744. In 1711 a Thomas Greenwood was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rodhill End, in Heptonstall. The latter was a man of some means and in 1737 gave the use of a building he had purchased to the church society. Among the trustees of this church was a John Greenwood of Hawksclough in Sowerby, yeoman, and William Greenwood, of Stone Slack, in Heptonstall. This Thomas Greenwood died 1742.

THE GRAVE OF THOMAS GREENWOOD

The headstone indicating the grave of Thomas Greenwood of Newton, Mass., is yet, after a lapse of over 200 years, standing in Newton well preserved in the old cemetery on Center Street. The stone shows very little of the long time it has been in place. Nothing is now standing to mark the grave of Hannah, first wife of Thomas, who was probably buried here, but the gravestone of her father, John Ward, and others of the Ward family are yet in place. Aside from the gravestone of Thomas Greenwood there are today only four other stones yet standing, which mark graves of the many Greenwoods who have been buried here. These standing stones are in memory of Lieut. Josiah Greenwood, aet. 83, Thomas Greenwood, Esq., who d. Aug. 31, 1774, aet. 79, Mrs. Hannah Greenwood, consort of Thomas Greenwood, Esq., who d. Dec'r. 23d 1777, aet. 85, and Elizabeth Greenwood, dau^{tr} of Mr. John & Mrs. Elizabeth Greenwood, who died Octo^{br} ye 10th, 1755, Aged 8 mos & 10 days.

The grave of Thomas Greenwood is near the back of the ancient cemetery and is close beside the graves of the Wards. The standing stone, without mound, alone marks the grave.

THOMAS GREENWOOD HOMESTEAD

To any person a little acquainted with the topography of Newton, Mass., the map shown in the front of this volume will clearly show the location of the estate of Thomas Greenwood, which he occupied at time of his death and which he purchased of Isaac Parker. Names of his neighbors and location of their homes are also given. The map shows the town of Newton as it was in 1700. At present, 1912, all parts of the house of Thomas Greenwood have disappeared and on the site of the Greenwood homestead is now a very large and elegant establishment owned and occupied by George and Anjie Armstrong. This is now a very valuable part of Newton. Just when the original house disappeared is not known for a certainty. It was probably standing in 1841, when the property was bought for $5,000 by Ezra Hutchinson from William Ladd. On June 30, 1866, Ezra Hutchinson sold to Francis M. Johnson for $28,000 and he had evidently very much improved the property from what it was when Mr. Ladd owned it. F. M. Johnson built a large and expensive establishment. The house was partly destroyed by fire after his death and stood in that state till 1896 when bought by Nathaniel M. and Elbridge K. Jewell, who rebuilt it. No division of the original property was made until Aug. 1, 1888, when Susan M. Johnson, widow of Francis, sold a part of the south side to Mrs. Hope V. Baker. The Newton boulevard syndicate pared off a part of the estate and it may have lost a little on the south side when Beacon street was laid out. The Boston (Sudbury River) aqueduct passes through the estate. The land originally extended from Beacon to Hammond streets.

By Middlesex county probate records, docket 6909, old series, it appears: Thomas Greenwood, Sen., dec'd Sept. 1, 1693, widow Abigail and sons Thomas and John admrs.; widow's dower, £88 6s. 5d. of the personal property and to have £I II s. 8d. annually from the income of the estate; eldest son Thomas agreed that 2d son John should have the real estate, John to pay yearly allowance to the widow, to pay to Thomas £103 10s. 6d. and bring up William and James till they are 14 years old, teach them to read and write and have the profits of their labors; the widow to have ⅓ of the house and at her death ⅓ of the real estate to be divided among the 4 brothers; John to pay James and William when of age £81 1s. 3d. apiece; Abigail and Thomas guardians to the minor sons, William and James, Nov. 20, 1694.

John Greenwood, after death of his father, Thomas, occupied the Greenwood estate till day of his death. His will made Aug. 15, 1737, probated Oct. 4, 1737 (Midd'x probate docket 690) leaves to wife £66, one half indoor furnishings, ⅓ corn crop and use of n. e. room down stairs. Thomas, eldest son, to have £60 after wife's dowery shall cease; son Daniel owes £40, he to pay the estate £10 only; movables to daughters: Eliz. Childs, Hannah Fuller, Ruth Jackson, Susanna Bacon, after decease of wife and £5 apiece; balance of estate to youngest son Josiah. As executor of his father's estate Josiah files an agreement to provide a horse for his mother to ride to church on.

The third occupant of the Thomas Greenwood estate was Lieut. Josiah Greenwood, son of above John. His will made 25 Mar., 1789, probated 13 June 1792 (Middlesex probate docket 690) provides wife Prudence to abide by her marriage agreement; legacies to now surviving children, Neverson, Ebenezer, Ester Murdock, Sarah Greenwood and Alice Clark and granddaughter, Sarah Bartlett, consisting of books and house furnishings; daughters Norcross and other children and grandchildren, not mentioned have had their shares; to son Ebenezer all the real estate and personal not disposed of.

The occupancy of the Thomas Greenwood estate by Ebenezer was only for a few months. A petition, Dec. 17, 1792, reads: Whereas Ebenezer Greenwood, yeoman, is a person who by idleness and intemperance wastes his estates so as to endanger his family being reduced to suffering, the court orders his removal from Ex'orship of his father's estate and puts him under guardianship of Dr. John King, Capt. Wm. Hammond, Gent, and Sam. Murdock. Neverson Greenwood, house wright, is summoned to administer the estate but declines and Wm. Hammond appointed; inventory, I Apr. 1793, 30 acres, house and barn, £257, 7 acres meadow £18. Court orders that real estate of Ebenezer be sold to pay his debts. It is described: 37 acres of tillage, pasture and meadow, with house and barn pleasantly situated about one mile from Mr. Homer's meeting house. Sold at public vendue for £331 to John Thwing.

John Thwing, the fifth occupant of the Thomas Greenwood estate, by his will 1813, left the use of his homestead, about 30 a., with house and barn, to his wife Patty for life; balance of his estate to be sold for benefit of his children; will presented 9 Nov. 1813. Widow, Martha Thwing, d. 1820 (Newton death records).

Thomas Harback and Eben. White, exeors. of will of John Thwing sold at public vendue for $2585 thirty acres with house and barn and 4 a. of marsh to Mary Ladd and Sarah Ladd, spinsters, Nov. 1, 1820.

Sarah Ladd sold to Mary Ladd ½ of the above June 4, 1822.

Mary Ladd sold the whole of the above to Wm. Ladd for $4000 Apr. 20, 1824.

Wm. Ladd for $5000 sold same to Ezra C. Hutchinson, Sept. 9, 1841.

Ezra C. Hutchinson sold to Francis M. Johnson June 30, 1866, for $28000.

Susan M. Johnson, widow of Francis, sold part of the above (south side) to Mrs. Hope V. Baker Aug. 1, 1888.

Susan M. Johnson and Wm. and Lucy Peabody (widow and daughter of F. M. J.) sold balance of real estate to Eugene R. Knapp, 16 Mar. 1890.

Eugene R Knapp sold to A. D. S. Bell, 20 Dec. 1892.

Bell and ux. sold to Robert Bishop 27, July 1894.

Dana Estes, Bell & Bishop combined their real estate and formed the Newton Boulevard Syndicate Sept., 1895.

Above syndicate sold to Mrs. Carolina D. Jewett the Hammond street side of the lot reserving a strip on the west side, which borders the Newton (Commonwealth Ave.) boulevard, 18 Apr. 1896.

Nathaniel M. Jewett and Elbridge K. Jewett, exors. of will of Mrs. C. D. Jewett, sold the above to Mrs. Angie B. Armstrong, present owners, Feb. 27, 1899.

POSTERITY OF THOMAS GREENWOOD

FIRST GENERATION

1 THOMAS GREENWOOD[1], a weaver, aged 22, came from England to Boston, 1665, and two years later settled in the Southeast part of Cambridge, now Newton, Mass. He m. first, June 8, 1670 (Wednesday), Hannah Ward, aged about 19,* d. before 1687; second, about 1687, Abigail (Spring)?†

Mr. Greenwood,‡ d. interstate, at Weymouth, Mass., Sept. 1, 1693, aged 50 and was interred in the old burying ground in Newton, leaving an estate of about £480. He was made freeman, Feb. 2, 1681, a member of the church, a justice of the peace, constable, selectman, of Newton, 1686-71; 1690 and 1693, the first town clerk, which office he held many years. He was one of the first signers of a petition to the general court, May 8, 1678, asking that their village be set off from Cambridge and incorporated as a new town. There were 64 freemen in the village and 52 signed the petition which represented that they were crippled in person and estate by the late Phillip's war; that they were at great expense in building and enlarging their meeting house and in building a new house for their minister; that having so many families now the law required them to support a school of their own; that the townsmen had imposed a tax of "three county rates" without their knowledge or consent which they considered harsh proceedings. The petition though actively opposed, was granted and Cambridge Village became New Town, Dec. 8, 1688, which has since become Newton.

William Ward* came from England and settled in Sudbury, Mass., where he had lands granted to him in 1640. His eldest son John Ward, b. in Eng. 1626, m. ab. 1650 Hannah Jackson, b. in London, Eng., 1631, bap. May 1, 1634. (See Jackson Family, p. 57.) John Ward was a turner by trade, settled in the east part of Cambridge Village, now Newton. His father-in-law conveyed to him and his wife, 45 acres of land, upon which he built his dwelling house and also a garrison that was used in Phillip's war and remained about 170 years, till 1821, having sheltered 7 generations. At the organization of the town of Newton, Aug. 27, 1679, he was chosen one of the first selectmen and continued 8 years. He was the first rep. to the general court from Newton, and was returned 9 years. He had 13 children, Hannah, the eldest, m. Thomas Greenwood.[1]

†John Spring of Newton, one of the administrators of the estate of Thomas Greenwood, had a da. Abigail, b. Feb. 2, 1666, and she is supposed to be this 2d wife of Thomas Greenwood. She m. 2d, Feb. 15, 1697, Josiah Fisher, b. in Sherborn, Sept. 15, 1655, son of Anthony of Dedham. Josiah was rep. to the general court from Dedham 1699, selectman 1697-1701; she d. Sept. 6, 1708. He had 2 wives before Abigail and 1 after, d. Apr. 12, 1736. Children by Abigail were: Abigail (Fisher) b. June 3, 1698, d. before 1736; m. Oct. 21, 1723. Joseph Guild; Experience (Fisher) b. Apr. 14, 1700, d. Jan. 18, 1777; m. 1st, Dec. 2, 1730 Ebenezer Woodward; 2d, Apr. 16, 1747, Rev. Samuel Dunbar, of Stoughton, Mass.

On a tax assessment, Sept. 5, 1688, for "2 persons and estate 6s. 8d." appears the name of Thomas Greenwood as tax Commissioner. His name as one of the Commissioners also appears on the tax lists for Stowe, Medford, Charlestown and Marlborough in the summer of 1688, the Commissioners serving under Governor Andros.

Thomas Greenwood was born at Heptonstall, Eng. The record of his baptism appears on the register of the old parish church at Heptonstall June 4, 1643, son of Thomas Greenwood of Heptonstall. Thomas, the father, was baptized at Heptonstall, Feb. 26, 1610, son of Abel (born 1585,) who was son of Rev. John Greenwood, the Congregational martyr, executed at Tyburn, Eng., Apr. 6, 1593.

Thomas Greenwood learned his trade as a weaver in his native town of Heptonstall, where the establishment of woolen manufacture took place at a very early period. Members of the Sutcliffe family were manufacturers of cloth in the vicinity of Heptonstall as early as 1311. The old Heptonstall Cloth Hall, which stood on the North side of the church yard at Heptonstall, was long a market place for the sale of the product of the clothiers of the vicinity.

The line of ancestry of Thomas Greenwood back to Wyomarus runs through John the priest given in the ancient English pedigree of this volume.

5 + William b. Oct. 14, 1689; m. Abigail Woodward.

Vol. 11:54 Also mortgage Isaac Parker, Camb. Village, husbandman, for £20, 10s. to Thos. Greenwood, 24 acres in New Cambridge, orchard, meadow & upland & house and land left him by father, John Parker, who bought it of Nicholas Hodson. Bounded by Thos Hammond on E.; Nat. & John Hammond on S. & W.; John Druce on N.—21 May, 1691. Mortgaged not endorsed but probably released by the heirs.

*Thomas Greenwood used three "e's" instead of two in spelling his last name. His father, Thomas, his grandfather, Abel, and his great grandfather, John, the priest, used the same method of spelling Greenwood, but the four sons of Thomas spelled the name with two "e's" as the name is universally spelled today. Thomas Greenwood's method of spelling his name is but one of the numerous ways used by the earliest members of the Greenwood family before any set form was established and it has been an aid in tracing his ancestry. Previous to the year 1600 the Greenwood name was variously written: Grenwod, Grenwode, Grenewod and Grenewode. A John Grenewodde was living at Grenewodde Lee in 1439 and a John Grenwodde was a curate, in Heptonstall, 1520 to 1541. The name William Grenehude appears in a will proved at York, Jan. 30, 1430. The name Thomas Grenewoodde appears in a will dated Nov. 11, 1543. A Luvecock Grenehod was before the court at Wakefield in the year 1274. A will of Joan Grenehude, widow, was proved at York, May 14, 1491; also, a will of John Grenehode, of Bramham, proved at York, Apr. 24, 1484.

SECOND GENERATION

2 REV. THOMAS GREENWOOD[2] (Thomas[1]), eldest child of Thomas and Hannah (Ward) Greenwood of Newton, Mass., b. in Weymouth, Mass., Jan. 22, 1671; m. Dec. 28, 1693, *Elizabeth Wiswall, b. Sept. 20, 1668, d. in Weymouth, Jan. 24, 1736. Mr. Greenwood graduated from Harvard A. B., 1690, ordained, Oct. ——, 1693, over 1st Cong. Church in Rehoboth, having labored for a short time in Sekonk, Mass. He took his wife there Tuesday following his marriage. The town agreed to give £95 current silver money of N. E., toward his settlement, and for his comfortable subsistance, the contributions of strangers and £70 yearly, "to be paid to him one third in silver money and the other two-thirds in beef, pork, and all sorts of merchantable corn, rye, butter, cheese, and merchantable boards at the current price set upon by the selectmen of the town," and the use of the pastors' and teachers' lands so long as he should continue in the work of the ministry in Rehoboth. He d. Sept. 8, 1720, at half past 2 P. M., aged 50.

Judge Samuel Sewell in his diary makes frequent mention of Rev. Thomas Greenwood, of Rehoboth, whom he visited on his official rounds. On Friday 30 Sept., 1709, he found Mr. Greenwood "dangerously ill of a malignant fever. At parting, Mrs. Greenwood, with tears, desired prayers for her husband and that word be left with Caleb Stedman at Roxbury, to acquaint her husband's bro., John, at Newtown."

*TROWBRIDGE FAMILY:

I. Thomas Trowbridge came from Taunton, county Somerset, England, founded a charity for poor widows, which is still administered for their benefit, came to Dorchester, Mass., about 1634. He was a merchant and engaged in trade with Barbadoes, W. I. He appears to have been in New Haven, Ct., 1637, and 1644 returned to England, leaving his houses, goods, lots, estates and chattels in trust with his steward Henry Gibbons, who kept possession in New Haven many years. His three sons, James, Thomas and William, he left in care of Sergt. Thomas Jeffries, who came from the vicinity of Taunton, Eng. to Dorchester, Mass. and 1637 was in New Haven, where his sons were brought up. In 1662 these sons obtained power of attorney from their father, making over to them jointly and severally his property in N. Eng. and they sued Gibbons for possession. THIRD GENERATION

7 REV. JOHN GREENWOOD[3] (Thomas[2], Thomas[1]) second child of Rev. Thomas and Elizabeth (Wiswall) Greenwood of Rehoboth, Mass., b. there May 20, 1697; m. May 25, 1721, Lydia , b. ——, d. ——. He d. Dec. 1, 1766. Another record (Boston) says Jan. 1, 1767. Mr. Greenwood graduated from Harvard 1717, preached in Seekonk, Mass.; Mar. 10, 1720, he agreed with the selectman of Rehoboth, Mass., to teach school for 6 months for £12 for the first quarter, and the second quarter at the rate of £45 per year. Nov. 14, 1720, the town voted "Whereas the church of Christ in Rehoboth having made choice of Rev. Greenwood to preach the gospel amongst us for the present, the question being put whether the town would concur with the churche's choice, voted by the town to raise £70 per annum till we have a minister settled amongst us." Feb. 13, 1721, a vote by the town was taken for inviting Mr. Greenwood to become the minister of the west part of the town [his father's former parish]. 119 votes were cast in favor of the measure and only 5 against. June 10, 1728 the Rev. John Greenwood and Rev. David Turner presented petitions to the town for an increase of their salaries, stating that their present salaries were inadequate to their comfortable support, the town in answer to their petitions voted to add to Mr. Greenwood's salary £20, and to that of Mr. Turner £30, making each of their respective salaries £100.

Rehoboth, Dec. 2, 1757.

To the first church of Christ in Rehoboth under my pastoral care, Brethren:—Whereas, by Divine Providence I am rendered unable thro bodily infirmity to carry on the work of the ministry any longer, after 30 odd years labor therein, and whereas, you presented to me the town's resolutions not to grant any support for another minister here except I release my salary, ye ministering lands and quit my pastoral office; altho I think it not reasonable in the town to defer it, yet for peace's sake and that the gospel might not be hindered, I release my salary from the eleventh day of March next as aforesaid and by the advice of some ministers and brethren called to advise in the affair and at the desire of this church, I do likewise promise to ask and to receive of this chruch a dismissal from my pastorate over them as soon as a council of churches can conveniently sit for the orderly doing of it, provided the church, particular persons, or the town, or any or all of them, will come under obligation for my support and maintenance during my natural life to give me £20 annually to be paid one half money and the other half in specie equal to money, the first year to be paid the 11th day of March, A. D., 1759, and so from year to year by the 11th of March successively during my natural life as aforesaid, and that I and my estate be not taxed toward public charges. John Greenwood.

These propositions the church and the town readily acceded to, and 40 individuals pledged themselves jointly to raise annually the support required, agreed to give yearly various sums each from £2 to 2 bushels of corn, or 2 bushels of rye. He was succeeded by Rev. John Carnes, a native of Boston.*

Dec. 23, 1777, aged 85. Mr. Greenwood† was a farmer and a deacon of the church in Newton, captain of militia, justice of the peace, selectman 4 years, representative to the general court 13 years, town clerk 23 years. He is said to have been one of the proprietors of Paris, Maine, in 1735, and to have given his son Joseph land in Holden, Mass. His gravestone bears this inscription "died Aug. 31, 1774, aged 79. A gentleman deservedly esteemed not only in private life, but for the faithful discharge of duty in the various public offices he sustained in church and state. The memory of the just is blessed."

*On the stone close beside Thomas Greenwood's grave, are these words still plain to be read 1898: "Mrs. Hannah, consort of Thomas Greenwood, Esq., who died Dec. 23, 1777, aged 85." Jackson's History of Newton says "Thomas Greenwood m. Lydia ——." Thomas Greenwood in his will bequeaths "to Lydia, my beloved wife," and her petition to have the will proved is signed "Lydia (her + mark) Grenewood." It is possible she had a double name, tho that was not common at that time. We think most likely a mistake was made by the stone cutter or the one who ordered it. They named their first daughter Hannah and she named her first child Lydia.

†Thomas Greenwood's will is dated Aug. 10, 1774, in which he makes his son-in-law, Capt. John Woodward, the sole executor, gives his son Thomas 20 shillings, and to the children of his son John Greenwood, "John my best gold ring and to Thomas Judson my next best gold ring and to Elizabeth another gold ring and also 20 shillings to be equally divided among them." All other property to his executor for the maintenance of his wife, Lydia, and at her death all remainder of property to be equally divided between his son Joseph and daughter Hannah. The sums given to Thomas and the children of John were considered their full and just share considering what they had previously received. The homestead consisted of 86 acres of land.

June 27, 1707, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Goddard) Adams of Framingham, Mass. She d. ——. Daniel Greenwood was a farmer and evidently a man of influence. He and his wife were received into the church in Sutton 1730, by letter from Framingham. Dec. 20, 1731, the town of Sutton appointed a committee to "seat the meeting house" and they reported Daniel Greenwood has "the fore seat in ye side gallery." Sept. 8, 1742 he, with others living in the north part of Sutton, petitioned to be set off as an independent parish, but the town denied the petition, and 1743 they carried it to the general court where it was granted. This portion of the town was incorporated as Millbury, 1813. May 1, 1780, he was chosen one of a committee to consider the matter of the national constitution and report "what they do, and do not approve of." Feb. 20, 1881, he was a delegate from Sutton to a county convention called to remonstrate with the general court against an act repealing a tender act. He was selectman 13 years and assessor 6 years. He died June 8, 1812.

206 WILLIAM GREENWOOD[3] (William[2], Thomas[1]) eldest son of Dea. William and Abigail (Woodward) Greenwood of Sherborn, Mass., b. there Nov. 4, 1721; m. ——, 1745, Abigail Death, b. Oct. 3, 1723, d. Oct. 1, 1814, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Barber) Death* of Framingham, Mass. Mr. Greenwood was a carpenter in Sherborn, moved to Dublin, N. H. as early as 1762, as he worked on the roads that year, and was the second English settler. Nine other persons from Sherborn located there soon after. May 4, 1762 he was chosen one of a committee to measure and establish the bounds of a ten acre lot for a meetinghouse, which he erected. He was also chosen to provide a preacher for two or three Sundays as soon as may be. The first meeting of the proprietors of Dublin held in that town, was at Wm. Greenwood's house, 1764; only two previous meetings had been held, and those were held in Dunstable, Mass. In 1765 he located permanently with his family on lot 8, range 6. The town of Dublin was incorporated 1771, when it had 23 voters. At a meeting of the township proprietors Feb. 14, 1771, at the house of Eli Morse, William Greenwood was chosen moderator, and was one of a committee to sell the lands of delinquent proprietors to pay their taxes. Apr., 1773, the meetinghouse being completed, he was chosen one of a committee to plan out the pew ground. He and his brother Joseph were on the committee of inspection to see that the resolves of the Continental Congress be observed. He and his sons, Eli and Joshua, served in the Revolutionary War. The hardships of these pioneers are hard for people of this time to fully appreciate. It is said that on one occasion the snow being so deep that horse or ox teams could not move, Mrs. William Greenwood put on snow shoes, took a half bushel of corn on her shoulder and went by marked trees seven miles to Peterboro, the nearest mill, had the corn ground and returned home the same day. Mr. Greenwood was killed at the barn raising of Dea. Benjamin Leonard, June 28, 1782. It is probable he served in Revolutionary War under Capt. Joseph Parker, paid July 18, 1776, £10.25, and under Capt. Solomon Stone, Col. Enoch Hale, July 21, 1777-Sept. 26, 1777.

*The name Death is from the French De Eth, is found in county Kent, England, and has been misspelled or Englified in this country into Death. Benoni Death of Sherborn, Mass., sold to Daniel Greenwood of Dublin, N. H., No. 3, 6th lot in range 7, for £76, Dec. 25, 1772. John Death and Aaron Greenwood, witnesses before Reuben Kidder, J. P., Cheshire Co., N. H. Deeds III, 547.

He says: "I bought a paper mill in West Philadelphia, Pa., built by two Vermont parties who ran it six years; I doubled its production with the same set of hands—had no new one, and discharged no old one and at the end of one year they presented me with a silver service costing $104, of which I am very proud. I made paper for 35 years, made many improvements; was the first in the world to make paper of wood. I invented the only machine for making envelopes now in general use; sold paper, cotton and silk machinery for 12 years; real estate for 15 years; 1875 moved to Fenton, Mich., and retired. I manufactured paper in Millbury, Mass., Paterson, N. J., Philadelphia and West Philadelphia, Pa., and in 1861 on the Antietam Creek in Md., where I was given 24 hours' notice to leave town because I was 'a damned abolitionist.' I left in six weeks. I built four of the best paper mills in the country and was credited by good judges with making paper equal to the best English, French and German. My religion is humanity,—do good, live honestly, uprightly, and do justice to all. I do not believe the Bible is inspired any more than my wife's writings. I write some over the nom-de-plume of 'Veni Vidi.'" In 1861, at the request of Surgeon Gen. Dale, he entered the army as surgeon of the 11th Mass. regulars. He was promoted to U. S. surgeon and assigned to Hooker's division. His executive ability attracted attention and he was assigned to Baltimore to organize the Stewart Mansion Hospital, of which he had charge till Nov. 1862, when he was ordered to St. Louis to equip the Lawson Hospital. In December he was appointed medical director of Northwest Arkansas, where he had charge of the wounded after the battle of Prairie Grove, and sent a report of that battle to Washington, D. C., more complete than was received from any other battle during the war. Feb., 1863, he was put in charge of Benton Barracks, St. Louis, Mo., which became one of the largest hospitals of the war. Dec., 1864, he was put on the staff of Gen. Thomas and organized the Wilson General Hospital for colored troops at Nashville, Tenn. In 1867 he returned to Winchendon and entered into practice with the enthusiasm of a younger man. In 1875 he established the "Highlands" in 2052 George Barber (Raymond) b. Apr. 21, 1822; d. July 4, 1896. He spent his early days on his father's farm. When nearing his majority, he bought his freedom and went to Grafton to learn the carpenter's trade. On his return to Winchendon worked for a couple of years for Major Sidney Fairbank, whom he then bought out and formed a partnership in carpentering and building with Charles E. Forristall. Mr. Raymond later bought his partner's share in the business, Mr. Forristall continuing in his employ until 1865, when he took the sole charge of the business for one year, Mr. Raymond being obliged to give his entire attention to the pail factory at Harrisville. In 1867 Raymond and Forristall built the Steam Mill in what was then almost a wilderness. In 1868 a copartnership was started by Raymond, Forristall and C. J. Rice for the manufacture of blinds, chair frames, getting out lumber, hay rakes, etc. Additions were made to the business in various directions until it assumed large proportions. On the death of Mr. Forristall the two remaining partners continued the business, and after the death of Mr. Rice, Mr. Raymond associated himself with his son, Henry M. Raymond who has for several years had the entire active management of the business, his father remaining a silent partner. By force of circumstances he became interested in the grocery business, in the Tucker-Rice block, of which he owned 1-3 interest. His eldest son, Hervey T., has for some years had the active managership of the store, his father's name being the only visible sign of his connection with the business. He has filled many responsible positions in town affairs, selectman from 1861-6, assessor in 1863-4, overseer of the poor, committee for making plans for the brick school, and various other stations of trust and esteem. He also had the entire charge of raising troops for the War of the Rebellion. He joined the First Congregational church when a boy, but in young manhood drifted away from the tenets of his childhood, but in 1859 he became a member of the Baptist church and has ever since been a consistent and influential worker. Many of the poor of the town have cause to revere his memory for kindnesses heaped up, pressed down and running over. A man of great integrity and energy, he was ever amenable to reason and ready to yield his own way to the wish of the majority. For fifteen years he had been a sufferer from a chronic and hereditary form of rheumatism that led to ossification of the hip joints, so that he walked with extreme difficulty and with the aid of canes. Chadwick, b. in London, Oct. 15, 1852. Mr. Whitney was a man of rare natural ability, indomitable energy, and perseverance. At the age of 17 he went to California in a sailing vessel 'round Cape Horn, arrived in San Francisco with a working capital of ten cents, and made his way to Placer County gold mines. But gold digging did not suit his taste, and he engaged in shooting birds and larger game for the city market, thus accumulating his first capital. In about a year he returned to New England and commenced shipping goods to his brothers in San Francisco, with whom he was a partner in business, but soon transacted the business on his own account. During the Civil War he was a member of the independent corps of cadets of Massachusetts, guarding the distinguished Confederate officers, prisoners of war in Fort Warren in Boston harbor, 1862, and after, as captain of Co. F, second Massachusetts regiment. Having been quite successful, in 1865 he retired from commercial life and having from boyhood a strong passion for athletic and out-door life, he sought the mountains and parks of Colorado, making his way across the plains before any railroad existed and while the route was incessantly threatened by hostile Indians. While in Colorado, he wrote the first book on that comparatively unknown territory. It attracted wide attention, and proved a forcible argument for Colorado's admission to statehood. He was appointed sole commissioner of Colorado to the Paris Exposition in 1867, and received the first gold medal, awarded unanimously by the international jury, who recommended him to the especial consideration of the Emperor, from whom he received the decoration of the Legion of Honor for his exhibit, which was considered the best in the American department. So great was his popularity in Colorado that the Democrats and Republicans unitedly nominated him for the U. S. Senate, and would have unanimously elected him had he not preëmptorily declined; whereupon the legislature passed complimentary resolutions, recognizing his eminent services, had them handsomely engrossed upon parchment and forwarded them to him in the name of the Commonwealth. He made four round trips across the plains to the Rocky Mountains before the completion of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1868, two of which were in 1865, while the Indian wars were raging. He purchased land largely, improved it by irrigation, and in 1875 had 11,000 acres in grain. He was the first to raise and cure raisins on a large scale, having a vineyard of 250 acres, and in 1877, shipped the first carload that ever went East from the state of California. He, with others, owned nearly a million acres of grazing land in New Mexico, 300,000 acres of which were fenced and stocked with about 20,000 cattle. Almost unaided, he built and equipped the Silver City and Deming Railroad of 50 miles, in New Mexico, was president of it two years, and later sold it to the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Co. He had a splendid residence on his Spring Valley ranch of 25,000 acres in Rocklin, Cal., surrounded by extensive grounds, beautifully laid out with many miles of picturesque drives. He also had a summer resort in the woods of Maine, "The Pines," at Rangeley Lakes, where he spent the summers. He was public spirited, building railroads and reservoirs for irrigation and was forward in every enterprise for the public good. He was president of the Placer County Board of Trade, and officer or director in many industrial enterprises; d. at Monterey, Cal., Jan. 17, 1913. Their children are:

Jonathan Greenwood spent his early life on his father's farm in Gardner, and at the age of 26 settled in East Templeton, Mass., purchasing, Mar. 16, 1812, the Tucker tavern property, situated on the fifth Massachusetts turnpike, just completed as a through stage route from Boston to Albany, N. Y. There were 4 taverns on this turnpike within a distance of 2 miles. He entertained the traveling public, cultivated the extensive lands belonging to the property and manufactured tubs, pails and barrels, which were all wrought out by hand. Aside from 3 saw and gristmills, this was the only manufacturing business in town. In 1820 he disposed of the tavern property to his brother-in-law, William Whitney, and erected a cooper shop 60 x 30 feet, 1½ story, at the corner of Main and Mechanic Streets, for the manufacture of tubs and pails. He employed regular hands and the shop was a place of much activity and hard labor, as the only tools employed were the axe, saw and shave. Much of the product was sent to Boston by teams, a distance of 60 miles. This work he continued till his death by rupture, Oct. 24, 1846. Not long after this, water power and machinery were introduced by Thomas Temple Greenwood [No. 3345].

3346 Mason Munroe[6] b. May 3, 1819; d. Oct. 11, 1848; a mechanic in East Templeton and Boston, Mass. Though his life covered but a brief period and was constantly restrained from following out any special line, his mechanical ingenuity was striking. In the space of two years, while employed in a mechanical pursuit, he invented and put into use a machine for boring wooden chair seats for caning, wonderful for the rapidity with which it did the work, and one which in all its main features is used today by all chair manufacturers. He improved a machine for squaring and cutting to a given length the stock used in wooden chair-seats, by means of double circular saws. Though he believed no machine could be made that would run prepetually by its own force, he gave his mind to the study and did construct one that would run several hours, which was regarded as a great wonder. It was generally believed that had he been permitted to live to the allotted age of man, and had better health, he would have taken rank among the distinguished inventors of the country. He m. Mr. Greenwood was a farmer in Dorchester, that portion incorporated, 1868, as Hyde Park.* Leaving his home at Sherborn at the age of 19, Mr. Greenwood walked to Boston, owning nothing of this world's goods but the clothes he wore and 50 cents in money in his pocket. He obtained employment in the ice business; later in Faneuil Hall market, where he earned sufficient money to purchase one of the stalls (No. 99-101). At the market, with his brother Bela, he remained until he bought the farm now bearing his name in Hyde Park, Mass. By public acknowledgment of the faith, he joined the Baptist Church at Hyde Park in the fall of 1863, and on July 17, 1864, with his wife, was baptized in the Neponset River, near the Fairmont Avenue bridge. He was a member of the school board of the town of Dorchester, was public spirited, gave land across his farm for the construction of Har-

*The Greenwood Grammer School at Hyde Park was named for Elihu Greenwood, who owned a large farm at the time the town was laid out and incorporated, Apr. 22, 1868 (it was originally a part of Dorchester), sold a large portion of it to the Hyde Park Land and Building Company; but gave the school-house lot to the town and an eight room school building was erected. Twenty years later the house was destroyed by fire and a new one erected on the same spot. The Greenwood district has seen the largest school attendance of any in town, and is rapidly increasing. Greenwood Avenue and Greenwood Square were also named in honor of Elihu Greenwood.

3782 Charles Freeman (Brown) b. Nov. 12, 1833, converted at 17 he united with the First Baptist church in Cambridge, and ever after maintained a consistent Christian character. He was a druggist and his professional services were sought for the medical dispensary on board the U. S. schooner, John Griffin, of the mortar fleet, under Com. Farragut. He distinguished himself by devotion to his particular line of service; was incessant in his labors for the sick and dying, and contended heroically with the diseases peculiar to a southern climate. In the absence of a chaplain, he served as such, and showed in the midst of severe temptations and trials the mighty power of grace, and how that can fit the most unassuming to perform even bolder and nobler deeds than facing the cannon's mouth. A naval comrade says of him: "He was a living epistle, known and read of all men, nor do I ever remember meeting with any person so thoroughly conscientious and unswerving in religious principle. We reached the Bahama Banks in company with another vessel on Sunday morning and came to anchor. The captains of each agreed to spend the day fishing at the Orange Keys and invited Charles to accompany them. His reply was, 'I should be happy to go with you on any other day, but dare not go on the Lord's day.' They arrived at the navy-yard at Pensacola on Sunday morning, and again the captain invited him to go with them, but he replied, 'It is against my principles to go visiting on Sunday.' On our arrival at Key West he asked the captain for the privilege of holding meetings on board, which, after a week or two, was granted, and it was a thrilling sight to see him standing on the quarter deck, surrounded by the ship's company, lifting up his voice to his Heavenly Father for a blessing to rest upon the officers and men of our vessel. I have seen the captain on his knees after leaving our meeting. I shall never forget when at the close of the day we held our evening devotions, how he would lift up his heart to God in behalf of those around him who had never experienced a Savior's pardoning love. Nor can I cease to remember how, when a number of the sailors were down with intermittant fever he would try to get them to read some tract or religious book; and especially in the case of a young man who afterward died. He was to be found daily at his bedside reading and praying with him, and endeavoring to impress upon him the necessity of a change of heart." As his revered father and loved brothers and sisters were longing and expecting to see him back again, to recruit his exhausted energies by breathing his native New England air, and enjoy the love-tokens of a large circle of friends, the sad tidings came that he died in Pensacola hospital of yellow fever, Sept. 26, 1862. His name is on the soldiers' monument in Cambridge.

Mar. 27, 1832; graduated from the Vermont University at Norwich, 1852, as a civil and mining engineer, went to Illinois and engaged in the survey of railroads till the war of the Rebellion; he enlisted in the 51st Illinois Regiment, soon commissioned first lieutenant and May 9, 1863, as captain of Company H. Soon after the battle of Stone River, Gen. Rosencrans selected him as a competent engineer to organize a topographical service and he was directed to report to Gen. Stanley, chief of cavalry for the army of the Cumberland, with whom he remained till the fall of 1865, when the 4th Corps of that division was mustered out in Texas. He was slender of form, but always strong and well, ready for service, day or night, and participated in the battles of Perryville, Stone River, Hoover's Gap, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, three months of almost continuous fighting in Atlanta campaign, Spring Hill, Franklin, Nashville, which ended the mission of the Army of the Cumberland in the destruction of Hood's army. July 28, 1864, the president commissioned him lieutenant colonel and inspector. Soon after this he was appointed chief engineer of the Kansas Pacific R. R. During this service he constructed 150 miles of railroad in 100 days, and the last day laid 10¼ miles in ten hours. In 1870 he was appointed general manager of construction of the Denver and Rio Grande R. R. and on completion of first division was made superintendent, which office he held till the road was finished to Canon City. He went to Mexico, 1879, and was murdered Aug. 29, 1880, 18 miles from the city of Mexico,

*The following notice is from the "Two Republics," a paper published in the city of Mexico: "It is our melancholy duty to announce the death of one of our most worthy and useful American citizens, Col. Wm. H. Greenwood, chief engineer of high repute, and engaged in the Sullivan & Palmer Co. He was murdered last Sunday on the public highway near Rio Hondo. He was accompanied by an assistant engineer and a servant. Upon arriving at a baranca (i.e. a ravine) he separated from his companions and proceeded ahead of them at an increased pace, with the object of examining that locality. His companions saw him as he came from the baranca and descended upon the

Mar. 19, 1892; she d. May 15, 1909. Mr. Chapman was a dry goods merchant in Milwaukee, Wis., and his firm was one of the largest in that city. He was a wide-awake, vigorous business man. Much interested in music; at the age of 15, with but six weeks of practice, he played the violin in the church choir of his native town of Gilead, Me. He first entered the dry goods business in the store of C. F. Hovey & Co., Boston, Mass., as clerk, where he served in that capacity six years. In 1850, with his brother, Hannibal, he opened a store on Hanover street, Boston, under the firm name of T. A. & H. G. Chapman. For seven years here and on Tremont street in Boston the firm carried on the dry goods business. In 1857 Mr. Chapman moved to Milwaukee, Wis., and under firm name of Hasset & Chapman established a dry goods store on East Water street of that city. Mr. Hasset retired at end of five years and was succeeded by Mr. Charles Endicott, who remained in partnership with Mr. Chapman three years. Since that time and until his death Mr. Chapman was alone in business. In 1885 Mr. Chapman's store, including its entire contents, was destroyed by fire with a loss amounting to nearly $700, 000, the property being only partially insured. Mr. Chapman received letters and telegrams of sympathy from the trade far and near for his great loss and being strongly urged by the people of Milwaukee to rebuild he erected a new building covering a space on the ground floor of over 17,000 square feet and so artistic in style and so well arranged for business that the building is regarded as one of the most perfect retail dry goods stores in the country and a store the city of Milwaukee is justly proud of. At time of his death Mr. Chapman's employes with their families numbered more than the combined population of the town of Gilead, Me., his native place. In 1888 Mr. Chapman was offered the nomination of Governor of Wisconsin, but declined it.

In 1855 he went to Fortunes Landing, now Richmond, Minn., and built a house for himself. In 1855 he purchased 160 acres of government land near New Hartford, Minn., erected a house for himself and cultivated a portion of the land; sold and moved to Galesville, Wis., 1860, where he followed his trade and erected many residence and business buildings, bought a village lot and 40 acres of land, built a house for himself. In 1878 sold and moved to Flandreau, S. D., took up a homestead and tree claim of 320 acres, built a substantial house, began farming, dug three wells before he obtained good water, but the third was good, bubbling up bright and sparkling. The severe winds so damaged his trees that he abandoned that and devoted his energy to the homestead which his widow says he made to "blossom as the rose." They were often threatened with prairie fires and had to make a "fire break" around his entire premises (three furrows of the soil turned up). Notwithstanding the drawbacks he was very successful. He took a lively interest in education and politics, a Republican; thoroughly loyal to all good causes, highly respected and honored; d. May 5, 1882, and soon after the widow sold out, moved to Galesville, Wis., where she purchased a farm of 213 acres with good buildings. They had, all but 3 b. in Galesville:

Mr. Greenwood* was a surveyor in Hebron, Me. He surveyed several towns in Oxford County and Greenwood was named for him. He represented several towns of the district of Maine in the general court of Massachusetts before the state was set off. He moved from Hebron to Monson, Me., 1823.† He lotted out a number of townships near Moosehead. In 1827 he had charge of a crew driving logs down the Wilson stream in Willimantic, Piscataquis county, where there was plenty of rough water and hard work. The logs were got by the falls, which was the last serious difficulty they would meet with, when Mr. Greenwood called the crew to him saying they would stop there for a lunch and a little rest, and ended by congratulating them on their success. "Our difficulties are passed," he said, when a gust of wind broke a limb from the tree under which they were sitting, that falling struck

*Mr. Greenwood was employed by the trustees of Hebron Academy, 1811, to lot their portion of the township of Monson. The west half of Monson was given to Hebron Academy and was settled by Hebron people; the east half was given to Monson Academy of Mass., and was settled by people from that town. In 1823, he was employed to lot the remainder, when he moved his family there, and Sept. 8, was chosen by the town as agent to attend the court of sessions at Norridgewock. Oct. 7, 1823, to oppose the acceptance of a county road recently laid out. Apr., 1824, he was chosen moderator of town meeting and chairman of selectmen. He was candidate for representative to the legislature, 1824, but failed of election. Mar. 23, 1825, he was chosen moderator of town meeting, first selectman and town agent.

†It is said he was practically reared by his grandmother Shepard [No. 250].

PARENTS AND DESCENDANTS OF NATHANIEL AND SAMUEL GREENWOOD, OF BOSTON, MASS.

5734 MILES GREENWOOD, a baker, b. about 1578, of the parish of St. Peters, of Mancroft, Norwich, England; was m. in that church, Oct. 21, 1599, to Anne Scath, of Barnum Broome, County Norfolk. Date of his d. or his parentage are not ascertained. He was located in Sudbury, County Suffolk, England, for a time, and then returned to Norwich, where his daughter, Mary, was baptised, Dec. 1, 1616. He is mentioned in the will of Edward Greenwood, of Norwich, Eng., proved in April, 1608, who was son of Rev. Edward Greenwood, rector of Great Dunham, County Norfolk, who d. in 1591, and was a cousin of the Rev. John Greenwood, rector of Brampton, County Norfolk, whose will was proved at Norwich, Eng., in October, 1663.

5735 Miles[2] Greenwood, son of above Miles and Anne (Scath) Greenwood, baptised at St. Peters of Mancroft, Norwich, Eng., Sept. 1, 1600; m. Abigail ——; was a worsted weaver and was buried at the church of St. Michael at Pleas, Sept. 3, 1658. He was admitted a citizen of Norwich, Eng., May 3, 1627. His arms, with the family descent, dated Sept. 23, 1723, are to be found in Vol. I of Miscellaneous Pedigree of Sir Isaac Heard, now in the College of Arms, London, Eng. Miles was a lieutenant and chaplain under Oliver Cromwell. His arms were used on an ancient seal and are described as follows: Argent, a fess sable between three spurrowles (or six-pointed stars pierced of the field) in chief and three ducks in base, all sable. Edmonson's Heraldry ascribes to these arms the date 1594. These arms appear on the door of the tomb of Samuel Greenwood, and descendents, at Copp's Hill Cemetery, Boston, Mass. Letters of administration were granted to Abigail, the wife, at London, Dec. 23, 1658.

Children:

5943 James Mickleborough[8] b. Nov. 15, 1836, near Springfield, Ill.; is superintendent of public schools in Kansas City, Mo., which position he has held 37 years. The first school he attended was at Lick Creek, Ill.;

J. M. Greenwood.

afterwards the public schools of Loami, Ill.; unusually bright in mathematics, he often worked out the sums for all the boys at school. At the age of 16 his his father, with his family, moved to Missouri, which left him without school opportunities for 4 years and his time was spent in the work of the farm. But his ardor for learning was not quenched. With an old algebra, a geometry, Latin grammar and Butter's analogy, which he obtained, he spent his evenings, rainy days and Sundays, in study, until the contents of each book were mastered. He taught the first public school ever held in the township where his father now lives, receiving $15 per month for his services. The next winter he attended school at Kirksville, Mo. He continued laboring on the farm until September, 1857, when he entered the Seminary at Canton, Mo., taking in one year the entire course, except Greek, passing examinations in 20 branches, but his health failed through overwork and he was not able to graduate, although his oration was ready for delivery. For a year books were laid aside. From 1859 to 1866 his winters were spent in teaching; the remainder of each year in farm work. In August, 1867, he accepted the chair of Mathematics, Astronomy, Mechanical Philosophy and Logic in the North Missouri State Normal School, at Kirksville. He filled that position until June, 1870, when he was elected to the same position in Mount Pleasant College, Huntsville, Mo. In December following, he was re-elected and accepted his former position in the State Normal School at Kirksville, Mo., which he held until June, 1874. At the latter date, Professor Greenwood was elected out of 17 applicants to the position of Superintendent of the Kansas City Public Schools. After that he was elected Principal of the South Missouri State Normal School, at Warrensburg, Mo.; also of the Northwest Normal School, at Oregon, Holt Co., Mo., both of which positions he declined as he regarded his present connection with the Kansas City schools as the second educational position in the state. In delivering many public addresses on educational matters and writing extensively on similar subjects for the leading journals of Missouri, he has done much to defend and popularize the cause of education. He is much interested in mathematics, and has a very extensive library in that line. He m. Nov. 1, 1859, in Carroll Co., Mo., Amanda A. McDaniel. They have:
